Iceland's Great Anniversary.

A THOUSAND YEARS JUBILEE.

Bayard Taylor has been writing to the Y. Tribune a most interesting account of the ceremonies connected with the thousandth anniversary of the settlement of the far-off kingdom of Iceland. This land is now a part of Denmark, and as fitting commemoration of its existence a Government for a thousand years, great popular demonstration was held on the island, at which the King of Denmark was present, and a new constitution was granted to the people. Mr. Taylor describes the landing of the King on the island.

The formal reception by the authorities of Iceland and the delegates of the people was almost private in its character. The royal pier sloped down to a platform, between a double row of Danish flags hung with green garlands. The gentlemen stood on this platform, and none of their addresses or the replies thereto were audible at a distance of thirty feet. A small crowd of people, gathered on the sand at the edge of the water, cheered with some heartiness, but the main body of the people, about 2,000 in number, kept silent, as they heard nothing. In ten minutes all was over. The Governor came up the pier, followed by the King and Prince, both walking rapidly and looking very cheerful and amiable. They were received with a cheer which was evidently genuine, if not loud and universal. The people seemed unused to such a demonstration; in fact, I noticed several who opened their mouths as they took off their hats, made the beginning of a shout, and then timidly gave it up. After the King's suite came the chief officials, the bishop in velvet and satin, a snowy Elizabethan ruff, and a high hat, the clergyman and the members of the native committee—the latter strong, ruddy, farmer-looking men, whose white gloves did not harmonize with their heavy brown coats. There were about forty persons in all, and the whole crowd fell in behind them as they advanced toward the Governor's residence.

Here follows an account of the rejoicings: The King and his cortege had just entered the cathedral as we reached it, and the foreign naval officers who had been invited to the ceremony were crowding with the natives into the low northern portal. The choir was singing one of the ten new anthems composed for the occasion; lights were burning in the chandeliers, on the altar, and between the gallery-pillars; wreaths of the heather decorated the walls, ceiling and galleries, and there was a glow of flowers around Thorvaldson's baptismal font. The dull red of the walls and dark panels of the wooden ceiling harmonized well with these simple ornaments; the building wore an aspect of cheerful solemnity, becoming the occasion. The seats filled rapidly during the chant, men and women sitting together as they could find places. Then the service commenced, after the Ancient Lutheran fashion. In fact it was nearly an exact repetition of that we had seen in Thorshavn, except that the Icelandic language was used. The hymns were very simply and grandly sung; and the Psalm of Praise written by Matthias Jochumson, and composed by Sveinbjornsson—the first musical work by a native Icelander, I am told—produced a powerful effect. In whichever direction I looked, I saw eyes filled with tears. The repetition of the refrain: "Iceland's thousand years— Iceland's thousand years," rang through the Cathedral in tones which were solemn rather than proud, and gave expression to the earnest, religious spirit in which the people have come together.

After the service in the Cathedral, there was a procession, and the traveller thus describes a portion of the route: The road thither led past the prison, which is altogether the finest building in Reikiavik. But, alas for the wisdom of those who decreed its erection! It waits in vain for an inmate. The smooth-walled walls of gray lava-stone, the cheerful cells, the spacious prison-yard invite some one to be culprit and enjoy their idle luxuries; but the people are too ignorant to accept the call. On the summit of the hill above there is a rather graceful square tower, built by the students during their play-hours as a place of shelter when the weather was stormy; but now it serves as a beacon for vessels at sea and weary travellers approaching from the north.

The road, which was so broad and smooth that it must have been specially made for the festival, now crossed a long hollow in the stony soil and climbed a hill opposite, nearly a mile away, where flags, tents, and a moving multitude announced the location of Aasturvellir. The broad, rounded summit of the hill had been laboriously cleared of stones, and furnished a space where four or five thousand could have been accommodated; but not more than two thousand were present. There were a rostrum for speeches, a tent for the King, another tent which suggested a possibility of refreshments—and that was all. But the elevation, slight as it was, commanded a singularly bleak and sublime panoramic view. On all sides the eye overlooked great spaces of sailless sea or barren shore, until, fifty miles away, ranges of dark volcanic hills inclosed the horizon. The level evening sunshine fell coldly across the vast view, the wind blew sharp and keen from the north, and with every allowance for the tough constitutions of the Icelandic people, I could not see how much festivity was to be extracted from the place, time and temperature.

FARM SOLD.—The farm of the late George Patterson, containing two hundred acres, situated about four miles from Guelph, was sold at public auction by Mr. Knowles at the Town Hall today. It was knocked down to Mr. F. W. Stone for $9,800.

BEAUFEST.—Epps's Cocoa.—GREATLY AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Citizens' Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labelled—"Epps's Cocoa," Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

Spencer and Dr. Nash, the operators in the Kingston abortion case, were arrested at Pickton on Tuesday, and will be taken to Kingston for trial.

Town Hall, Guelph, Thursday Ev'g, September 3rd, 1874.

Doors open at 7 o'clock. Lecture to commence at 8 in the evening. Seats will be reserved free for Ladies. Children not admitted unless accompanied by their parents or guardians.

A PUBLIC POPULAR LECTURE WILL BE DELIVERED BY PROFESSOR EDWARD S. FRANKS,
Consulting Optician, Oculist and Aurist of the Royal Eye and Ear Infirmary of Manchester, Lancashire, England.

Inventor and Patentee of the Important Improvements in Spectacles.
Will Lecture on the Anatomy and Physiology of the Human Eye; and on the

USE AND ABUSE OF SPECTACLES.
The Lecture will be illustrated by large colored Diagrams, Models, Natural and Artificial Eyes, etc.

Dr. Franks lectures to disseminate useful knowledge, to introduce himself, and his uniform focus Spectacle Lenses to the inhabitants of this Town, knowing how wide a field there is in Ontario for the professional services of a well skilled optician, in this much abused and neglected branch of science (the correct adaptation of spectacles to defective vision). The dealers in spectacle lenses, generally being merely merchants, entirely unacquainted with the formation, and functions of the Human Eye, its diseases, the peculiar construction of different Lenses, or their individual relation to the needs of optically impaired Spectacles, or their individual relation to the Nerves of Sight, therefore are unable to advise in the selection of Spectacles, and are equally ignorant of the principles governing their scientific adjustment, points most required by the patient.
