The Scrap Bag.

Dear Scrap Bag: If a young lady has a gentleman friend calling upon her, should she assist him to remove and put on his overcoat, and should she see him to the hall door when he

London, June 14. ANS.-A young man able to make calls is undoubtedly able-bodied enough to remove his overcoat and to don it, without help. He is also probably intelligent enough to do so. It is not customary for a young woman to speed the parting guests to the very threshold. She receives the adieux of her callers in the "parlor." and does not accompany them to the front door. Why do you use the expression "gentleman friend"? Am I to infer that some of your friends of the opposite sex are not gentlemen? Pardon this harangue, but I sincerely wish I could do something to limit an everlasting and indiscriminate use of the words "lady" and "gentleman."

The dread of being thought queer is a most powerful motive for some minds. The fear of the comments or thoughts of others governs, or at least restrains, such people all their lives. They marry and bring up their children, bury their relatives, and conduct themselves in each and every crisis exactly as they suppose these people expect them to do.

"Mrs. L— is the queerest woman I ever saw. Why, if you tell her anything about yourself or your own affairs, and ask her opinion, she tells you just what she thinks!" Mr. and Mrs. John Kline, of Milledgeville, Sundayed with friends in Sterling.-Sterling, Ill., Standard. It is fair to presume they would not have done this if those friends had not on some previous occasion Milledge-villed with Mr. and Mrs. John Kline.

A woman of this sort said to a friend:

Madame de Stael had fallen out with the Viscount de Choiseul, owing to certain malicious reports circulated by the viscount. The story is given in "Savoir-Faire et Savoir-Vivre." One day the lady and the viscount met in company, on which occasion good manners required that they should speak to each other. Madame de Stael

"We have not seen you for a long while, Monsieur de Choiseul."
"Ah: Madame l'Ambassadrice, I have been ill." "Seriously, monsieur?"

"I had a narrow escape from being poisoned!" "Alas! Possibly you took a bite at your own tongue!" This little joke fell like a thunderbolt on the viscount, who was a notorious back-biter and mischief-maker. The lesson was a severe one, but he richly deserved it, and had not a word to say.

Leghorn hats, to be worn at suburban resorts, are trimmed with half-long black ostrich feathers, and large bunches of pink roses. Cameos and coral are both coming again into fashion, and she who has big oval cameo had better have it set at once as a belt buckle or made the special foundation of a theater hat.
