The Western Crop.

To day's dispatches from Winnipeg and other points in the Canadian West indicate that the most sanguine expectations in regard to the extent and quality of the crop are to be realized. Traces of white frost were discovered yesterday morning, but dose examinahad been done. The weather throughout the country is of the typical harvest variety. A Boissevain correspondent says that as the full moon past, the best informed are looking for writing from Winnipeg, avers that if the present ideal harvest weather continues, the Province of Manitoba will have nothing but No. 1 hard wheat to offer for sale this fall, and the grain buyers' avocation will be greatly simplified. The advance contingent of the harvesters from Ontario, which been giving his ward more than its included nearly 350 young men, reached share of gravel. If Ald. Cooper is 000 men en route from Ontario. With of the city. perfect weather, a vastly increased acreage under cultivation, and ample hands to rush forward the work of harvesting the grain, the season's crop should be unparalleled in both quantity and quality. Fortunate, indeed, is the lot of the Western Canadian

The Ubiquitous Peanut.

For a great many years, in fact, ever since its introduction in the North, the peanut has been regarded askance by polite people as a vulgar article. Just how this ill repute came about it would be difficult to determine. Many people who consider themselves wellbred do not hesitate to munch sandwiches and fruit in public places, while they would recoil in horror from a bag of innocent roasted peanuts. If one draws the line close enough it is doubtless vulgar to eat anything in public, but why the enjoyment of the toothsome peanut should be more especially vulgar, is not quite clear. Like the English sparrow, the goober seems rather to thrive, however, on persecution; and it will be glad tidings to its nillions of friends throughout America to learn that the feeling against it is gradually dying out. Every year has seen an increase of millions of bushels in peanut consumption, and yet the goober has remained a plebeian. Now, however, it seems to have lived down its past, to a certain extent, and to be taking its place in good society. The Richmond Dispatch professes to have made this discovery, and is immensely tickled ever it. The Dispatch remarks:

"Time was when peanuts only suggested circus rowdyism, gallery gods obstreperousness, and festive occasions of the proletariat. It is not so long ago that those who bought them from the corner stand did so in a shamefaced way, and concealed the bag lest any acquaintance should see what they had peanut peddlers on the corner, at the doors of cheap shows or at heart sorts. Little corner grocers or keepers of school stores kept them to entice children's pennies, for children and peanuts have always been companions, but they were strangers in the win-dows of the fancy grocery, confectionery, and delicatessen shops. All this has been changed. The peanut is now recognized in the market reports, and its crop prospects and prices are watched with more interest than any other 'nut' that grows above or below ground. The best shops now present the peanut in many enticing forms. As confection, a relish and a health food. Out of it is made a butter which conduces to health and longevity. Its oil, when properly treated, is admirable for salads. Hitherto the salted almond has been the elegant and aristocratic relish at the women's clubs, at receptions, at state dinners, and upon the tables of the 'smart set.' Now that tasteless nut is disappearing, and the lowly salted peanut is taking its place, while for dessert, the peanut bar, that most delicious of all confections, takes the place of wafer nonentities and trifling bonbons."

The Sweet Clover Pest.

There are many complaints about the pread of white millet or sweet clover (melilotus alba) along the country roads of Ontario, and its rapid encroachment on farms and market gardens, says the Toronto Globe. This has become one of the most injurious weeds in some parts of Illinois and other States, and the work of eradipating it has cost large outlays in money and labor. The present year been exceptionally favorable to its growth, and it is seen in abundance during the summer." along the country roads and in the vacant lots of cities and towns, some-times reaching a height of 8 feet and one after another, and I guess he'll more. The pleasant odor of the plant when drying and the clover-like texture and appearance of its leaves are no doubt responsible for its common name, but it is regarded as a most injurious pest of both farm and garden. It will soon be in seed, and unless effective measures are taken at once the seeds will be widely dis- facturers' Association, who have made tributed by ordinary vehicular truffle the trip from Montreal to Halifax and of a vase found at Nippur. It is claimed that the peculiar odor of the leaves will injuriously affect the milk of cows and will be persistent in butter. Beekeepers welcome the spread of sweet clover, as it is rich in honey that is easily gathered. The abundant store of honey in the common red clover is beyond the reach of the domestic bee, owing to the depth of the tubes, but the wild bee has a long probosis that enables it to gather London, Friday, August 22. red clover honey. Whatever use may be found for the sweet clover, it is already classed with the noxious weeds of the Province in bulletin No. 91. and may be brought within the provision of the statutes dealing with them. It is provided in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1897, chapter 279, section 2, that every occupant of land must destroy all Canada thistles, ox-eye in some parts of Southern Manitoba daisles, wild oats, ragweed and burdock, "and all other noxious weeds tion failed to show that any damage growing on his land, to which this act may be extended by bylaw of the municipality," in time to prevent the ripening of their seed. .. Poems the World Has Read.

Bonny Dundee.

[By Sir Walter Scott.] Sir Walter Scott is one of the most notable figures in English literature. He is equally esteemed as a novelist and a poet, and as both he was pro-hic. In the former branch of writing he produced about thirty novels, many the characters of which were creations of distinct originality. Among his more noted poems are "Marmion," "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," and the "Lady of the Lake." The following poem is found in "The Doom of
