IN ORDER to avoid all waste of water possible, the commissioners have followed the steps taken last year when they placed inspectors on the staff with nothing else to do, but to see that the consumers live up to the regulations. The inspectors went on duty yesterday, and until late in the evening there is no danger of a shortage they will report all citizens who are found using water for lawn purposes out of the regular hours—6 to 8 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, and 8 to 10 o'clock on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. Persons found violating the regulations will have their supply shut off until such time as they feel inclined to pay the penalty imposed by the board.

CHELSEA GREEN WILL BE KEPT AS A MODEL VILLAGE

County Councilors Visit Site of Proposed New Suburb Near McClary Works.

Chelsea Green is an ideal spot for a suburb of London, and it will be a prosperous and model village of workmen's families. This was the general opinion of the warden and the county council, who visited the place yesterday prior to taking into consideration the erection of a bridge at the foot of Adelaide street.

The council was fully attended, it having sat at 1:30 o'clock, and after a brief business session having gone in a body to Victoria Hospital.

Here Supt. Heard had the visitors divided into three companies and a thorough inspection was made. The various departments were visited, and the work explained. The utmost satisfaction with the general management of the institution was expressed by the councilors.

Conveyances took the party first to the new McClary works at the foot of William and Adelaide streets. After inspecting the place, Mr. White, of the London Rolling Mills Company, Col. Garthorne and Mr. Alex. Stuart conducted them across the river to the site of the proposed bridge.

Contractor Dudley was found here busy with gangs of men working on the construction of the bridge. The plan was shown the plan of Chelsea, which was a continuation of Adelaide street, Work being done on this at the time, it would be opened to the Vauxhall road. There is one street to the west and two to the east, and the plan is admirable. The treasures that lie at the bottom of the sea are now more easily obtainable by the invention of an instrument known as the hydroscope. This contrivance is shortly to be put into operation in order to find the lost fleet of Xerxes, which has remained on the sea's bed undisturbed for about 2,300 years. Search is also to be made for the ship chartered by Pompey to carry Pontic treasures to Athens and wrecked in the archipelago 1,500 years ago.

explained that the whole property was in the hands of the land company, the principals of which were the men interested in the rolling mills and the McClary works. These two places would soon employ several hundred men, and accommodation would be afforded for them here. The company did not intend building houses and letting them, nor would any of the land be rented. Their object was to supply homes for the workmen on the lots and the company would build a house for him, which he could pay in installments. Drains and sidewalks would be constructed by the company, so that the cost of these would be included in the cost of the houses. While they would dispose of the land to any one they would require assurance that the purchaser was going to build. Furthermore, they would provide that certain things should not be built. For instance, one thing the company had decided upon was that no liquor shall be sold in Chelsea. The council was pleased with the outlook, and the manager of the McClary Company expressed his hopes that the new future they would see a model and prettily-kept village there.

To get to this desirable location it was readily seen a bridge is necessary in place of the footbridge now spanning the river. The proposed bridge, of course, would be to make this bridge a public one by having it at Adelaide street, the county should build one here it would cost about $12,000 or $14,000, in which the companies would assist. However, it would take the place of the Vauxhall bridge, less than a mile up the river, for the latter is in a condemned state. If the Adelaide street bridge were built a new one would soon have to be put up in place of the present Vauxhall.

After an interesting inspection of the London Rolling Mills, the party was driven around to this Vauxhall bridge, and no one disputed that it was in bad shape. To close it was seen, would only require for the few residents near there the opening up of three lots, so that the road to Adelaide street bridge could be reached. This is what the Westminster Township Council have already agreed to do. The trip was an instructive one, and was much enjoyed by the council, who will now be able to deal with the matter in a more intelligent manner.
