SENATE TALKS OF CANNOT SUPPORT BORDEN PROPOSAL CATTLE EMBARGO

Hon. Mr. Bergeron, Conservative Member, Finds School Amendment Acceptable.

Ottawa, March 30. - Mr. Bergeron, the French Conservative member for Beauharnois, was the principal speaker in the autonomy bill debate today. Mr. Bergeron spoke exhaustively on historical and constitutional aspects of the measure, and said he had come to the conclusion that the Government herds was moved in the Upper House amendment effecutally protected the minority. He could not, he said, support Mr. Borden's amendment. He took the issue that there is an educational law in the Northwest Territories passed by the Government of Canada. If Great Britain wanted to This he quoted from the statutes of 1871. It required that Roman Catholic or Protestant minorities should be permitted to pay their taxes to the support of separate schools. That law had never been repealed. Clause 16 of the remedial bills was merely a re-enactment of that law, in case there should be dispute. He quoted from the early enactments of the territories to show that separate schools were established and maintained. There was a council of public to other countries, and there was no instruction, with two sections one Protestant and one Roman Catholic, the same as in the Province of cord with the resolution.

Mr. Bergeron cited the ordinances to show how the privileges of the minority were from time to time reduced, till now it had what were called separate schools, but were not in the spirit separate schools, The change was not protested against by Archbishop Tache, Appeal was made to the Government at Ottawa, looking to the disallowance of the ordinance of 1892. Such action was not taken, however, partly because the ordinance of the previous year to the same effect would thus have become effective again, and partly because Sir

Mr. Bergeron went on to say that he was not in favor of non-sectarion schools. He wanted children taught their duty to God. He doubted also if public schools were as effective as their advocates had hoped in making the people united. The close of Mr. Bergeron's speech was an appeal for tolerance and conciliation, so that every creed and nationality might feel that it was respected by the others. Mr. Bergeron expressed his satisfaction that two provinces were to be created, and thought that it was well for the Gov-ernment to hold the lands in its control. Mr. Belcourt, who followed Mr. Berargued at length that for reasons of public policy, it was expedient and necessary to enact section 16. The Government, he said, had to do one of three things. It had to continue, repeat or modify the act of 1885. The Government, y clause 16, was modifying that act. Mr. Borden's amendment proposed to repeal it. Going on with his argument, Mr. Belcourt said Conservatives favored schools in three. without religious instruction.

Mr. Belcourt ended with a prediction that the bill would be carried by a majority larger than that which the Government regularly had, and an appeal for toleration.

DEATH TOO GOOD FOR GEN. VILJOEN

fort Horsewhipped the Boer Hero.

New York, March 29, - Miss May Belfort, the English comedienne, who declares that Gen. Benjamin J. Viljoen hero of many Boer wars, made love to her during a period covering several years, last night made public for the first time many of the love missives she says she received from him. She declares that Gen. Viljoen, although he already had a wife in South Africa proposed marriage to her. She accepted him, she says, after he had promised to obtain a divorce, Subsequently, she de clares, he scorned her.

Miss Belfort's reasons for giving ou the letters are best told by herself. "I can no longer withstand," said Miss Belfort last night, "the oft-re-peated denials of Gen. Viljoen, that he had paid court to me. He has said he merely knew me as an acquaintance -nothing more. I feel that in justice to myself I should take this step to disabuse the public mind of any erroneous impression the attentions of Gen Viljoen may have caused.
"It is true I horsewhipped Gen. Viljoen publicly in Chicago, after he had made it plain that he had no serious intentions toward me. Indeed, upon that occasion, I carried with me loaded revolver, with which I intended to kill him. But I did not use the pistol, because, at the last moment, I concluded that death was too good for the man, So I horsewhipped him. But I have that gun yet, and here it is." Here Miss Belfort produced a re volver from a grip in her sitting-room

"I am a woman of sudden impulses," she said, as she handled the gleaming weapon, "and there is no telling what a woman scorned will do. "I am only a woman. I have no one to defend me, and I must, therefore, defend myself. I have no friends, no relatives in this country." Miss Belfort showed the reporter several large bundles of letters, all of Her Sister and Brother-in-Law by Gen. Viljoen. Extracts from some which, she said, were written to her of them follow:
