

Like the sapling spreading so green and wide,
Till it turns to a noble oak,
And stands so fair and full of pride,
Are the words that a good man spoke ;
In another's heart did they spring and grow,
Oh 'tis thus that our great thoughts begin to show.

