Mr Ross was then called forward, and received the Holmes' Gold Medal, the Chancellor expressing a hope that he might prove as good a man and as devoted to science and the duties of his profession as the late Dean of Faculty, whose name the medal bore.

Dr. Ross, we may also mention, was Chapman Medallist of the year in which he graduated in the Faculty of Arts.

The Dean of Faculty then delivered the prizes to the prize-men.

The graduates were then called up, and having made the required declaration, received formally the degree of M.D. C.M.

Dr. HICKEY then delivered the valedictory on behalf of the new graduates.

Professor FRASER then delivered a very excellent parting address on behalf of the Faculty to the new graduates. Adverting to the prospects before them, he told them that the medical profession neither offered to those who pursued it the great gains of commerce or the distinction won at the bar, or in the army, but it did afford the means of most extensive usefulness, of largely benefitting their fellow-men. To that end he urged on them the duty of preserving their own health and cultivating their minds. He specially dwelt on the evil effects of indulgence in alcoholic stimulants as robbing a man of his usefulness in his profession. He advised all those whose means permitted to go to the great medical schools of Europe ere settling down to practice. He pointed out the need to keep pace with the progress of science. He urged upon them the need of strict integrity, with reticence and patience in dealing with the sick, of the rule of doing to others as you would wish to be done by in dealing with their brethren in the profession: and finally, as their chief public duty, the promotion of sanitary reforms; pointing out how much might be done for their fellow-men in this direction.

THE DEAN OF THE FACULTY OF LAW (Prof. Abbott) then read the list of prizes and of graduates in that Faculty, as follows:—

Mr Bothwell was then called forward, and Professor Abbott proceeded to compliment him upon the fact that having been Logan medallist in the Faculty of Arts he now carried off the highest prize—the Elizabeth Torrance Medal—(founded by John Torrance, Esq.), in the Faculty of Law. He regretted the Medal had not arrived, and that therefore, Mr Bothwell could not on that occasion receive it from the hands of the Chancellor. He felt called on, therefore, thus publicly to compliment him on having won it. And he would add this also, that the future career of one who had won so much distinction in the University would be watched hereafter with no ordinary interest by his late teachers and others.

The Graduates being then called forward, made the required declaration.
