Companies Marched to St. Michael's Cathedral to Hear Chaplain's Address:

To the roll and beat of drum, the smartly uniformed De La Salle Cadet Corps wheeled and marched to the campus of the University Stadium yesterday afternoon. Trim, alert and with the measured tread of veterans the boys came on, headed by their band and led by the small drum-major in white and gold uniform, who wielded his stick with all the aplomb and dignity of field marshal. The colors of the corps and the scarlet of the instructor were bright notes in the middle of the gray and green of the cadets, and the khaki dress of the juniors, 80 in number, from St. Mary's School the first corps formed from the separate schools of the city.

As the inspecting officer, Major R. E. Barker, came upon the field, the Ceremonial and company drill, firing exercises, and company drill, firing exercises, skirmishing, the attack, physical evolutions, signaling, were all gone thru with soldierly precision, the wheeling. forming and agility with which the boys handled their rifles all evoking compliments from the onlookers.

At the close of the inspection the companies marched to St. Michael's Cathedral, where they were received.

MEAT AND PASTRY ROLLS.

Small quantities of cold ham, chicken or other meat may be utilized for these. The meat should be chopped fine, well seasoned mixed with enough savory, fat or butter to make it "chape," and formed into rolls about the size of a finger. A short dough (made, say, of a pint of flour, two tablespoonfuls of lard, one teaspoonful of baking poyder, sait and milk enough to mix) should be rolled thin, cut into strips and folded about the meat rolls, care being taken to keep the shape regular The rolls should be baked in a quick oven until they are a delicate brown color and served hot.

Silk or lace are the only fabrics and the weaves are distinctly new. The silk stockings in two tones are novel, and because of their shot effect are much favored. dary in importance to the dress and not be more prominent.

In fact, today dressing is such a fine art that to be stylish one must be attired with such consummate taste as to be out of the ordinary, yet not bizarre. To succeed in this it is necessary to keep all the harmonious accessories in subservience to a certain original line or color scheme in each costume.

Ringling's Circus Arrives Sunday Morning for Two Days' Performances.

Taking with him a strong box filled with currency and an eight-horse team, Commissary A. L. Webb will make his rounds among the local merchants today and do his marketing for the Ringling Brothers' Circus family. That which he will select will constitute the menu which, at breakfast, lunch and dinner, will on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday satisfy the appetites of 1,370 people, 41 elephants, 32 camels and a thousand or more wild animals. He will also stop at the feedman's to order hay and grain for the 735 horses of the Ringling show.

The circus trains will begin arriving from Hamilton, coming on the Grand Trunk Railroad. Very early tomorrow morning. A hot breakfast must be ready for the performers and working men when they reach their destination. There will be eggs, bacon, cornflakes, griddle cakes and coffee on the breakfast bill of fare. That means the cooking of 5,200 griddle cakes. 2,600 eggs, a world of bacon, and coffee by the barrel. Here is what Steward Webb will buy here today:

13,500 pounds of fresh beef; 900 dozen eggs; 2,400 pounds of bread; 450 pounds of butter; 75 bushels of potatoes; 150 pounds of sugar; 150 pounds of butter; 75 bushels of potatoes; 150 pounds of flour; 240 gallens of milk; 90 gallons of pie fruits; 150 packages of breakfast food; 60 crates of vegetables; 150 pounds of lard, and all the sundries incidental to the preparation of the foodstuffs. This supply will be entirely consumed within the time the show will spend here.

Still another important Ringling official will be here today when the "24-hour man" arrives. It will be his business to buy the baled hay for the zebras, the sweetmeats for the chimpanzees and the giraffes and to lay out the circus lot.

business to buy the baled hay for the zebras, the sweetmeats for the chimpanzees and the giraffes and to lay out the circus lot.

This official will also make arrangements for the sawdust and consult with the chief of police regarding the route of the parade.

Tomorrow being Sunday, the circus will observe a day of rest as soon as it is safely established under canvas on the Dufferin Park show grounds. This spot will doubtless be a mecca for thousands of sightseers tomorrow, for the novelty of having a big circus spending Sunday in Toronto is an unusual one, accompanied by many unusual and interesting sights. One of the Sunday features on the show grounds will be the three big horse tents, sheltering nearly 800 thorobreds, which will be open to the public thru-out the day.

Naphtha As An Aid to Housework

VERYONE is glad when they no longer have to care for oil lamps, for the daily task of cleaning the burners, filling the bowls and trimming the wicks is one that requires the most careful attention. Yet lamps available, for the light is soft, easily regulated and conveniently moved about. For those who still use the old German student lamp, or perhaps some-ng or more ornate pattern, the following will be appreciated. The lamp ald never be filled quite full, as the oil heats and expands when the wick is lighted. After trimming the wicks rub them over the edges with a rough cloth until they are a little frayed. This gives a heavier flame, and consequently, more light. When trimming, turn the wick down until only the burned edge is above the burner; remove this, but never cut into the unburned wick. Clean the burners every ten days with hot soda water and a stiff brush.

Dry in the oven and replace the wicks.

New wicks can be inserted from the top of the burner more easily than hey can be pushed upward, as they can be guided into the opening more evenly. When you want a dim light do not turn a large burner's, light low, for this will make an odor and smoke the chimney, but light a small lamp and shade it. The writer has used oil lamps and gasoline stoves in summer camps season after season, and knows that when lights are dim or flame is poor, the cause lies either in poor oil and gasoline or in careless cleaning of or a wrongly fitting chimney. Naphtha or kerosene is becoming well known as a cleansing agent, so that now we find many naphthalene soaps and powders on the market. These seem to wash clothes themselves, so quickly do they loosen the dirt. If the soiled spots are well rubbed with the maphtha soap and then wet and rolled up a few moments they will not need any hard rubbing or boiling. The dirty clothes become clean and the white ones white with it. A tablespoon of coal oil added to a bucket of hot water makes an excellent preventive for moths in carpets. Dip the broom in the solution and shake it nost dry, then go over the carpet with it. It freshens the colors wonderfully and makes an old carpet look almost like new.

A square cheesedoth moistened with kerosene makes a splendid polisher oiled furniture, removing all finger spots and marks without rubbing. It does not smell after a few minutes. Linoleum wiped up with warm water containing a little kerosene will keep bright. It also removes rust. Mix a little fine sand with the oil and rub it over the rusted metal until it is bright. When metal articles are to be packed away for any length of time, first rub them over lightly with coal oil. The naphtha soap that we are most familiar with is a yellow variety, but there is a new brand being introduced that is as white and fine as the best castile. It is said to be made for washing baby clothes and fine laces and glassware. This last use does not appeal to a good housekeeper at first, but there are many glass articles, like vases, chimneys and pendants, that should be highly polished and that are not used for containing food, so perhaps this laim is a good one, after all.

Thus it is better to use "Nature readers as suggestions and a basis for real work. Don't be in a hurry. Keep to childish interests. So many things in Nature are fascinating that we are in danger of starting everything at once.

danger of starting everything at once, forgetting that undigested facts are quite as harmful as undigested food. A receptive child tempts one to crowd subject matter, so we crowd in first steps in geology, astronomy, plant life, insect study, bird lore, etc. They are all interesting, but remember that the child's knowledge should bear close relation to his interest and experience. Study the temperament and environment of your own child, and work along lines where the foundation is already laid or interest already awakened. If you spend a summer at the seashore books on sea urchins, starfish and other forms of sea, life will be most helpful; but if you spend the summer at home or on a farm don't buy seashore books. Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets cure these troubles or if given occa-sionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the new-born babe. Viburnum or Guelder Rose. The snowballs are just now in all their glory. And such a glory! Any-ish-white pom-poms of five-petaled blossoms would be hard to imagine. There are several species belonging to the viburnum tribe, some of which produce later, after the blossoms have departed, large and thick clusters of bright and glistening berries. . These latter shrubs are among the pre-eminently beautiful autumn plants since, with the coming of the frost, the color-tones grow strikingly intense. The common snowball, so popular here, is a very old-fashioned shrub. One might almost as soon try to imagine old-fashioned gardens without their specimens of snowball as try to imagine spring without lilacs, in whose train they follow so closely.

Time is required to bring a snowball tree to anything like perfection. Given a small one-year-old root properly trained, one need not count on bloom before a good five years has negged before a good five years has passed.

And these shrubs require an open and fairly sunny situation before they will consent to cover themselves with the white globular blossom heads.

Many amateur gardeners train the bushes upwards from one main stem, rounding the shrub up in as symmetrical a way as possible in order to obtain a nice-shaped tree.

Some let the root-shoots come up free, without any restraining hand, the resulting bush being, as may be expected, very straggly. Others train up three or four stout central shoots, sometimes plaiting these loosely to-gether in order to give the twisted stalk so obtained a chance to hold up the hundreds of bloom shoots that will The snowball is a prey to many insects. They apiders swarm in the snow-white balls, creeping out over the hands when the branches are plucked. An early spraying, when the balls are first forming will tend to remedy this evil in a very great measure. Often, however, a medicated spray of Paris green or whale-oil soap lution is required to clear the trees from the pest.

now many will see the tender young shoots that should be blossomproducing next spring curled up and twisted and deformed in a sickly fashion. Careful examination will reveal a pest of black insects and swarms of busy ants draining the life of the new leaves. A strong coldwater spray is best here, the nozzle of the hose being directed closely against the infected branches. A daily hose-ing-off for a week or ten days will cure the trouble.

Plant the young trees in the early autumn as open as possible and pro-tect from frost.
