before him, and a glib salesman beside him, more than four or five men have bought cars that give them barely half of the enjoyment and service the right automobile can give. They never find out, perhaps, that another car, of another make, is twice better suited to their likes or needs. They never realize, it may be, the full possibilities of the automobile. They bought without certainty. They dealt with a concern whose interests lay in the sale of some one make, or two makes. Fair business, of course, honestly done, but—did the buyer get quite all he might have had? The man who buys an automobile from us gets the automobile that surely will suit him better the dealt with a concern that gave evidence to the effect that Lop Dillon had been drugged, is a bad one. We have seen the end of this notorious case, and it is well that it is so. that surely will suit him best,—unless he deliberately chooses another. His choice is made from the nine makes of motor-cars which represent the pick of what is best worth buying the nine makes which in this year, 1907, embody, each in its specific way, the staunchest construction, the best mechanical design, the utmost ease and economy of operation. Unless a maker's product can pass that rigid standard, as it is administered by our staff of experts, it can find no place on our list. From the sum of the authorist is well that it is so.

The only Canadian entry in the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Stake at Detroit this year is the bay gelding Johnny by Geneva (2.11½), owned by Hunt & Colter of Brantford. That Johnny is a fast horse, there is no denying, for, outside of Wentworth (2.04½). It is doubtful it any other Canadian bred trotter has ever been a mile as fast as the little unsexed son of Geneva. He made a couple of starts in select society in 1908. At Windsor, in that year, he showed that he was a high-class trotter, but it was at Font Erle, a couple of weeks later, that he showed his extreme fight of speed, when he was beaten only a head by the M. and M. winner, Rythmic, handled by the great Scot Hudson. as it is administered by our staff of experts, it can find no place on our list. If a poll were taken amongst the horse-If a poll were taken amongst the horsemen who follow the grand circuit, and who were at Memphis when this now celebrated race took place, there would not be one in fifty who would say that he thought Lou Dillon had been tampered with. As a matter of fact, there is not a great deal of difference in the records of the two horses, just a second and a quarter and any horseman knows that when two horses with speed so closely equal meet, if one even tho it has the faster record, is just a little bit "off," and the other is right on edge, the latter is most likely to be the winner.

Lou Dillon, while she possessed extreme speed, never showed that she was a great race mare, as she was always known to be somewhat whimsical. On the other hand, Major Delmar was not a two-dollar horse by any means, but demonstrated by his races on the grand circuit, before he became the property of Mr. Smathers, that he would race and keep trying, whether in front or behind, which was more than the mare would do.
