RAINY DAY.

By Abbie Farwell Brown. By Abbie Farwell Brown.

Snug indoors, all warm and dry, I watch the people hurry by,
Wet and weary, to and fro,
Thru the dripping rain they go;
Coats turned up and hats turned down,
On each face an ugly frown.

Everyone looks cross and sad—
I should think they would be glad
They had nobody to say:
"You must not go out to-day!"
I suppose they'd like to be
Snug and warm indoors, like me

Oh, how I should like to play
In the nice, wet rain all day!
I should like to paddle round
On the soaky, squishly ground.
Where the mud is good and thick,
I would stir it with a stick! And the lovely gutters—look! Each one is a running brook, What a dreadful waste it is, Shut indoors a day like this!

Mothers are afraid of wet,
And they always fuss and fret.
But these people in the street
Tramp along with soaking feet.
Little children, boys and girls,
Oh! What dresses! Ah! What curls!
Perhaps they have no one to care
For their feathers or their hair,
No dear fussy one to say. No dear fussy one to say:
"You must not go out to-day!"
That must be why they are sad,
Indeed, indeed, I must be glad!

Suffrage and Socialism.

An article in yesterday's Mail and Empire quotes the said dictum of Bernard Shaw, to the effect that suffrage by emancipation for women means the breaking up of the home and the dissolving of the marriage tieor, in other words, the carrying out of the most rabid of the socialistic cult's most role. rabid of the socialistic cult's most not-able lapses from moral standards, in theory, if not in practice.

The object of all such insinuations is obvious. It has been the custom of those who opposed a salutary reform from time immemorial to decry it as a tendency to lawlessness and anarchy. Now, the giving of the vote to women is a very different issue. If, indeed, as is suggested, women would all be in favor of loose standards of morality if they were once allowed to express themselves, the case would be some-what different. As it stands, it is quite the other way. Women's influence is all on the side of purer laws and for the sake of self-preservation of for no other reason, would tend to uphold the family rather than to destroy it. We ask for the vote for our protec-tion, for the protection of little child-ren, of whom, after all, we are the most responsible guardians, and held so to be under the law. No one has a right to deny women the suffrage of they demand it, nor to deny it to any woman who demands it. She is a moral. spiritual and physical being on the plane as man, and no less answerable for her actions to a jury of her peers, or to the Judge above all

It is not to be expected that woman can progress any further than she has done, that she can remedy the evils about her which are, some of them, n doubt, caused by her new activities, until she has won the right to express herself by some other means than the intimidating of her husband or the coaxing of public officers.

Socialism is a great issue of the age.

but what suffrage has intimately to do with it we have yet to hear. Attempts to connect the two arbitrarily are designing, cunning and altogether false.

"She hasn't," said the senior with conviction, "and that's her trouble. I wish she would let me buy her clothes viction that this was the keynote of the situation. People in general, and college girls in particular, have such infinite possibilities in the direction of clothes, limited of course, to some extent, by their bank accounts.

Fewer possibilities than the writer rewell possibilities than the writer seems to imagine. It is easy to make ends meet with "time," but time is more than money to the college girl—it is education. However, some devices are known to work, and neatness and prettiness are equally se-cured by them. One is described in this paragraph:

"Fads" have always been considered a college woman's prerogative, and there are several articles of dress which are distinctly college products. They are not at all what an outsider usually supposes them to be-merely some little eccentricity or peculiarity which is adopted for the sake of being "different." They are founded upon reason and have a truly utilitarian basis. The Peter Thompson suit, for instance, is invaluable when one is in danger of being shut out from the problem. breakfast. It can be gotten into al-most instantaneously. In its flannel manifestations it is warm, impervious to dampness, and absolutely invulnerable. It lasts "forever." And when of linen or any light wool material, it may even be worn to social functions.

The "batting hat," a small round headgear of straw or felt with a quill put somewhere, is used, usually in combination with a "Peter Tom," when off for a long tramp or drive, and has superseded the old time tam o'shanter. We spend so much time in perhaps three or four buildings, going back and forth from one to another, that any form of wrap that can be easily and quickly put on and off is very popular. The capes made by the Shakers are worn a great deal. 'Then there is the ever present sweater, its latest development being the jacket variety. It isn't always becoming and Gillies Lumber Company Seek Number of Appeals Are Heard-$90,000 From T. & N. O. Railway Commission.

In the non-jury assizes before Justice MacMahon yesterday the Gillies Lumber Company commenced a suit against the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway commission to recover $90,000 damages for the deetruction of timber on their property, liable. They further disclaim all negligence in the operations of their trains.

E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., and Robt. McKay are appearing for the Gillies people, and A. J. Thomson for the T. and N. O. Raliway.

John S. Gillies called as a witness said the licenses were usually paid at the end of each June to the Ontario Government in Ottawa. Neither in 1905 or 1906 was his firm notified that the licenses had lapsed or that his firm was not in possession. He saw the "burns" along the right of way from a train. His knowledge of the matter was not very extensive.

The old Gillies limit had to be sold for $20,000 less than it was worth because of the fire.

On the their expectation. In this way an incredible amount of money is made by the peasantry of Germany, France and the British Isles, particularly in the Counties of Norfolk, Lancashire, Yorkshire and the City of Glasgow. On the other side of the ocean, however, the prices realized are very small—perhaps not half or even one-third the prices paid in America, where tens of thousands of European canaries are marketed every year.

Nor is the extensive raising of cage birds confined to Europe. The women of North America by this means earn thousands of dollars yearly, so increasing their own comforts and many helping to pay off mortgages on their property.
