"Tim Hurst is the only umpire I ever saw declare a batsman out for stepping out of the box." said Jack O'Connor. the new manager of the St. Louis Browns, who was farming at the New York meeting. "It was in Cleveland years ago that Hurst had the nerve to make this ruling. We had a man on third with two out, and needed a run to tie the score. Burkett, at bat, stepped out of the batsman's box and hammered a terrific liner up against the left field fence for three bases. Hurst had his nerve with him, however, and promptly declared Burkett out, in spite of a hostile crowd and a threatened riot. I've seen lots of good umpires in my time, but Hurst had more courage than any of them. He gave visiting teams a fair break and was never a home umpire. It's too bad that he with not be on the American League staff next year."
