Stop Boxing in N. Y.
Help Game Generally

About the best thing that could happen to the boxing game would be for Gov. Whitman of New York to go thru with his announced determination to force the assembly, if he can, to repeal the law that legalizes boxing in his state, and that creates the boxing commission, writes Joe Jackson in The Detroit News. This may seem a peculiar statement, but it is a true one. The way the game is run in New York City, from personal observation and from the testimony of competent and fair-minded writers there located, is a disgrace, as well as a handicap to promoters in other states, who are willing to observe the laws and to give their patrons something for their money.
