

preaching its truths to all, regardless of previous religious condition, and trust the Lord of the Harvest to fulfil his promise that his Word shall not return unto him void. We would put the Bible in the place of the Pope, and Jesus Christ in the place of the Priest, and thus shed rays of heavenly light into this dense darkness, and leave to God to bring many souls out of darkness into his marvellous light. We would "preach the Word," in season, out of season, in our churches, in our school, in private houses, by the way-side, as we have been doing for the past fifty years, and as we expect to do more and more in the years to come. We would speak the truth in love, knowing that when Paul plants and Apollos waters, God will surely give the increase.

This may be a slow way of advancing the Kingdom of Christ on earth, but it is the way of Christ and his apostles, the way which has the sanction of the ages, and which, if persevered in, will not fail.

This good work has a glorious past, and I trust it will have a still more glorious future. Let us not fear, but go forward as the providence and Spirit of God may direct, knowing that no work undertaken in his name can fail.

May God bless the work and workers of the Grande Ligne Mission.
