in some manner in a fair proportion. If they consent, it will leave about $1,000 to be provided by members of the congregation. It will amount to about twenty per cent. addition to the amount now received from pew rents, envelope subscriptions and miscellaneous collections; and we think it will be preferable to ask it in the form of a systematic increase of voluntary contributions under the envelope system, rather than by raising the rents of the pews.

With these additions to our income we may look forward to maintaining the establishment of the Church in its present efficiency, and the services in their present beauty; while looking forward to the assured future which awaits the Church at the end of twelve years, when, freed from debt, it will possess a landed income ample for its support. If to this be added the income from an accumulating fund produced by sales of Cemetery lots and lands, the two funds will be ample to provide for the future care of the Cemetery, and also to place the future work of the Church beyond all doubt and danger.

With these cheering prospects, we hope that the income required in the meantime will be readily provided by the congregation; that they will also liberally support the effort, which the ladies have kindly undertaken, to provide for the suitable completion of the organ. The addition of a more convenient choir-vestry will be another matter for your consideration.
