CANADIAN GUIDES

(New York Times.)
Discouraging in The Nineteenth Century about Canadian guides, the descendant of parkman's concourse de bois, whom John Murray Gibbon, publicist, sportsman, most admires. The type is noted for courage, strength and endurance. Joe with a pack of 300 pounds, "walked faster than I could walk with nothing but a fishing rod." There was Joseph Paul, guide for the Northwest Company, who picked up a sugar barrel filled with bullets by a playful store-keeper, "and let it fall on the counter, smashing the woodwork to pieces and breaking the barrel so that the bullets spilled into the cellar." In the bush Joe had an appetite that matched his strength. A gargantuan eater was he. Fifteen eggs a day, five to each meal, bacon, fish, pork and beans, steaks and flapjacks. "Then he complained that he could not eat because of indigestion."

Comes of Heroic Stock.

If the French-Canadian guide is so brave and hardy, and wears so well, it is because he comes of heroic stock. To the end of the French Dominion in Canada no English names stand out in the opening up of the wilderness. It was the colonists of New France who sailed up the St. Lawrence, explored the Mattawa, pushed into Lake Nipissing, portaged down into the Great Lakes and were soon trading on the Mississippi and the Missouri, while the English colonists still hugged the seaboard. The Frenchmen hunted, trapped and were one with Indians, whose women they lived with. After the passing of New France there is a procession of English and Scotch explorers in the chronicles of the time: Samuel Hearne, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Simon Fraser, David Thompson, Sir George Simpson, Milton and Chadwick. The Rev. A. G. Morice in his "Dictionnaire Historique des Canadiens de l'Ouest" asks who did the hard work of the expeditions led by these travelers and promoters.

Famous Voyageurs.

The answer is, the voyageurs, who had penetrated and mapped the wilderness and were brothers of the Indian. Simon Fraser owed much of his success to the half-breed Jean Baptiste Boucher, known as Wacane by the Cree. On three expeditions Charles Legace was the guide and interpreter for David Thompson. The Hudson Bay Company found Alexis Bonami. Lesperance indispensable as driver of its bateaux in the fur trade, a man as strong as a bear and of a vitality no hardships could wear down. Toussaint Charbonneau, a guide of the Northwest Company was on all explorers' lists in the early part of the nineteenth century. For river service one French-Canadian, John Jacob Astor declared, was worth three Americans. In Parkman's "Oregon Trail" the French-

THE WONDER SALVE (Registered)

"It's great stuff for piles. I had them, bleeding, itching and protruding. The second application stopped the bleeding, and I have had comfort ever since. No, I'm not cured, but it's my own fault. I have felt so good I neglected myself. You can refer anyone to me."—A well known citizen's unsolicited testimony.

Canadian hunters are deservedly honored. Mr. Gibbon says that the French woodsman of the present day is admirably depicted in the Francois Paradis of Louis Hemon's "Maria Chapdelaine."

Some N. B. Guides.

There are also sterling guides among the men of British descent. "If any one," says Mr. Gibbon, "were to ask a New Brunswicker who is the best known native of the province, he would probably name the guide Henry Braithwaite, who, in spite of over eighty years, still calls and tracks the moose 'with the energy of youth.'" Other famous guides in New Brunswick noted by Gibbon are Adam Moore, Arthur Pringle, Harry Allan and Claude Knapp, names well known to American sportsmen. A character whom Mr. Gibbon met on the Upper Tobique was Van. He had built a cabin near a lake round which there was a large clearing.

"Must have seen some work to clear this bush," he remarked. "Not a bit," he said. "All it cost me was a little salt. It was the deer that did it—a shot of salt at the root of each bush, and they cleared the whole place."

The Canadian guides respect themselves, and must be treated as equals by the rich sportsmen, "even though they may out of courtesy serve you first at the campfire and sit at a separate mess." Their scorn for a valet, or any other satellite, is unprintable. A silent lot of men, one must be careful not to intrude upon their reserve. In Quebec most of the licensed guides are French-Canadians, half-breeds or Indians. Ontario attracts 20,000 non-resident anglers every year. "For the Indian the Anglo-Saxon guide in Ontario has frequently a good-humored but not well-

"DR. FOWLER'S"

Saved The Lives of Four Children

Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially among children, during the summer months than any other form of disease. According to statistics, in the City of Toronto alone, in the past five years out of 1008 deaths of children, from diarrhoea, 157 died during the four summer months. It therefore behooves every mother to look after her children on the first sign of looseness of the bowels by using Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, a remedy that has been on the market for the past 77 years, and has been proven to be the best there is. Mrs. Harold Sellers, Pennfield, N. B., writes:—"Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry saved the lives of four of my children when all other remedies failed. It stopped the vomiting and terrible diarrhoea with which they were troubled. I will always recommend it, and now always have a bottle on hand in case of emergency."

Weak Eyes

If your eyes are weak and work-strained, if your vision blurred, if you find it difficult to read and must wear glasses, go to any druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Put in a fourth of a glass of water and let the eyes be directed. Strong eye and sweet relief will make you see. Friends about Bon-Opto. You can see how Bon-Opto strengthens eyesight so per cent. more than any other eye medicine. Druggists everywhere sell it under a money-back guarantee.

better hunter. "The Indian," said a white guide, "never seems to get lost. I guess the Lord gave him the sense of location." The Canadian guides have figured a good deal in "red-hot" contemporary novels, but they don't recognize themselves. Said one of them: "What can I do with fiction? Sooner than read one of them books, I'd wash windows or kill time in some other damned way. Now newspapers is something different. You can get ideas from a newspaper."

Mr. Gibbon has found the Rocky Mountain guides, who have much to do with pack horses, the most original and robust in profanity, but it is to be said for them that their "capacity for swearing is more than equalled by their capacity for hard work."

Sportsmen's Paradise.

The sportsmen's paradise is in the northern areas of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for there the moose are abundant, black bear are numerous, fish swarm in lakes and streams and caribou roam in herds. The local guides are rough diamonds, but fine fellows. "These Canadian guides," the writer says in conclusion, "represent the most virile element in North America, and deserve more recognition than it is usually their fortune to obtain."—N. Y. Times.

CANADA LACKS NATIONAL ART

New Brunswick Woman Believes It Will Come from Rural Folk.

(Toronto Globe)
Women who are interested in art are looking forward with eagerness to the visit of Miss Grace Helen Mowat of St. Andrews, who will come to Toronto for the Exhibition, bringing with her materials and workers to demonstrate "cottage craft," samples of which were shown at the great fair last year. Canada, Miss Mowat declares, has no national art, and it is her conviction that the women of rural districts are the ones to give true expression to a distinctive art, since it is in the country that one sees the most beauty.

"Canadian national art must come from the hearts and heads and the brains of the farm people," said Miss Mowat recently when addressing the Women's Institute of New Brunswick.

Among samples of "cottage craft" which she displayed at this meeting were bags of native homespun on which appeared pussy-willows, branches of fir with their brown cones, trilliums, lambs, and other beautiful things seen only in the country. From all over Canada requests are reaching Miss Mowat for more information concerning "cottage craft," and country women are keenly alive to its importance.

Buckley's

Why delay—Begin to-day.

WOULDN'T you like to be rid of that violent sneezing, shortness of breath, sense of suffocation and racking cough?

Wouldn't you like to get immediate relief and feel that the trouble has gone for good? Wouldn't you like to feel that you have a reserve power against Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, and their allied diseases? If you would, take Buckley's 32-day Double Treatment.

The Buckley Treatment not only allays these acute symptoms, but is especially effective in bringing about a change of the system so that if they do return they return in less severe form and shorter duration.

August, 17, 1921

"Worth its weight in gold."

It seems a long way to have to send for a single bottle of your valuable Asthma Treatment, but to me it is worth its weight in gold. Last winter I was not able to work for nearly three months. I tried every kind of treatment I could hear of but none did me any good for any length of time until I received your sample. Then I bought two bottles which put me on my feet in a surprisingly short time.

Take it Back!

CERTAINLY take it back if it isn't doing you good. Have a little patience, of course. You can't expect to get well in a day, especially if your case is chronic. But use the 4-day sample which is given free with the 32-day treatment, and if at the end of the four days you don't feel any beneficial results, take the complete treatment, just as it is, back to your druggist, and get your money. And you shall be the judge. Just you!

In one container.

The small package is the free trial. The large package contains the 32-day treatment.
