CEREMONY OF ANOINTING.

Some weeks ago one of the German papers printed an article of considerable interest concerning the origin of the oil with which the King and Queen will be anothed at the concerning the origin of the oil with which the King and Queen will be anointed at the coronation.

The oil has a strange origin. Like the oil with which Clovis, King of the Franks, was anointed, and which was brought from Heaven by an angel, so also this English coronation oil is of "divine" origin. Mary herself brought it to Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, when he was an exile in France. The oil was in a golden vessel, which had the form of an eagle, the balm or ointment being in a crystal box. The saint gave this divine gift to a monk in Potitiers, who hid it under a stone in the Church of St. Gregorius. Here it remained until the time of Edward III, when another blous man saw the hiding place in a dream and brought the miraculous oil to the Black Prince. Henry IV, was the first King of England who was anointed with Thomas a Becket's oil and balm. According to tradition, the vessel has the form of an eagle with outspread wings, is of gold, and about seven inches high. The oil is dropped first out of the beak of the agle into a spoon, and then on the King's head. The Queen must submit to the same ceremony, during the course of which her court ladies protect, her from the eyes of spectators by holding a vell before her.

The organist at St. Paul's yesterday was Herr Heniot Levy. The old organ spoke with a new tone and with dis-tinct effect under the acute touch of this able artist. The services were very bright and impressive.—Hallfax Her-ald, 16th.

ARRIVAL OF CORONATION CONTINGENT

Club on 14th July.

AN ACTICE CHURCH.

Foreign Missions was the theme Sunday at the two services in the Reformed Baptist church. Pastor Trafton preached a powerful sermon in the evening, when the offertory amounted to $103. This was supplementary to the Sunday school collection in the afternoon, which amounted to $11.14. The Reformed Baptists of St. John have hit the nail on the head. They interest the children in the work of the church.

HOW HE FELT.

Edward Atkinson. addressing an audience on Auti-Imperialism, concluded, says the New York Times, from the vociferous applause with which he was received that there were no expansionists among his hearers. So he said, boastingly:

"If there is an expansionist here, I should like to ask him his name, and where he lives, and how he feels now!"

Thereupon one man arose and answered:
"I am an expansionist My name is Robert Field. I live in Hanerhill, and I feel like a thoroughbred horse among a lot of jack-asses."

for three days' demurrage of the vessel. The plaintiffs' case was that on the first day of discharge, October 28th, they were compelled to lose three hours, and afterwards the unloading proceeded most unsatisfactorily. It took 10 working days to unload, whereasas the steamship ought to have been discharged in seven days, and, in fact, could have been discharged in that time. For the defence witness stated that there was no unusual delay in the unloading, and that on occasions the men were kept waiting at the ship's hatch.

At Saturday's hearing Holman Gregory said the point of the case was, were defendants' men ready to receive the timber? He did not think there was much doubt but what they were. The case, as put forth by Mr. Inskip, did not show that a delay had been caused by any specific act on defendants' part. What plaintiffs did say was that defendants did not take enough wood per day, and throughout the whole of the correspondence that had been submitted that was the note. the whole of the correspondence that had been submitted that was the note that had been struck. Plaintiffs said defendants had not taken 150 standards a day because they had not room in their yard, but the evidence on the other side had been conclusive, and showed that the yard was not full, and that there was sufficient room for the wood. He pointed out that the cargo was exceptional. It consisted of small stuff, which was more difficult to unload than large timber. The discharge had been at the rate of 110 standards a day, which, taking all circumstances into consideration, was a favorable average. He contended that no evidence had been given to show that defendants had caus Mr. Inskip, in reply, pointed out that the terms of the contract which had been entered into relieved the owners of all obligations. He argued that the plaintiffs had an unanswerable case, and upon the evidence they were entitled to three days' demurrage, at £30, a day. The judge said that he was not go ing to say that 110 standards or 100 standards per day was too slow a rate of acceptance by the merchants; and he was not going to say that 150 standards was the rate at which the ship could put over her rall, or the merchant ought to take. It would be idle to attempt to lay down any such rule at all. But he was going to arrive at the number of days which the Huelya the number of days which the Huelva ought to have taken to discharge by something in the nature of guesswork. He could not help it. Taking into consideration the circumstances of the case, and the fact that the merchants did some kind of sorting, to which he had no doubt the delay was referable, he thought that 133 standards a day did some kind of sorting, to which he had no doubt the delay was referable, he thought that 133 standards a day he thought that 133 standards a day FREE TRIAL TREATMENT he thought that 133 standards a day ought to have been discharged by the Huelva, and that she ought to have been discharged in eight days. That meant judgment for the plaintiffs for £80 and costs. Stay was granted to enable defendants to consider whether they would appeal;
