Interview with Stokes.

[From the N. Y. Times]

In his greeting there was almost an air of jollity. Stokes had changed his attire, being dressed in a loose-fitting jacket and light-gray trousers. Nestling in the folds of his spotted ruffled shirt bosom was his solitary brilliant. He seemed loth to refer to the subject which was the all-absorbing topic of the day, and a stranger would never have suspected that he was the principal actor in the bloody drama of the day previous.

The following is the conversation:

Reporter—Mr. Stokes, I am sorry to meet you here with this terrible crime hanging over your head.

Mr. Stokes—You need have no fears for me. I am no murderer. I have read the papers, and I assure you there is a tale yet untold.

Reporter—Can you bear to hear the worst? (He had not yet been informed of Col. Fisk's death.)

Mr. Stokes—Certainly. I can bear to hear anything.

Reporter—Mr. Fisk is dead.

Mr. Stokes—Yes, he died about an hour ago.

Reporter—Well, it is a sad loss to the business community; but the papers should not prejudice me by calling me a murderer. Some of the narratives read like a romance. I never wished to trouble you personally, and never dreamed of offering him any. I could say more, but you can certainly appreciate my position. My counsel have closed my lips.

Reporter—Did you follow Col. Fisk's carriage down Broadway yesterday?

Mr. Stokes—That statement is preposterous; I rode down from the Yorkville Court yesterday afternoon in company with Assistant District Attorney Fellows and Mr. John McKim; we stopped at Delmonico's, corner of Chambers street, and took some lunch.

Reporter—Did not Judge Barnard say there that there was a bench warrant out for you—you having been indicted by the Grand Jury?

Mr. Stokes—I did not see Judge Barnard on Saturday, and had no knowledge from any source of there being any indictment found against me; had I heard of such a thing I would not have believed it, for I know there was nothing to warrant such a proceeding.

Reporter—It is the general impression that Mr. Stokes' severe examination of Mrs. Mansfield, added to the alleged remark of Judge Barnard, drove you to desperation, and that you intercepted Mr. Fisk on Broadway and followed him to the New Cent Hotel.

Mr. Stokes—There is not one syllable of truth in that report; I never dreamed that Col. Fisk was out of his house; I supposed him confined to his room with an ailment. I merely wished to trouble you for a moment, and was nothing more than a gentleman requesting a gentleman requesting his presence here this week. Here Mr. Stokes remarked that he was displeased with the instructions of his counsel, and, therefore, could not speak further.

Reporter—Do you have any fear for the result as regards yourself? Here Mr. Stokes took a small wallet from his pocket.

Mr. Stokes—He accused himself, and tapped on the window of the door for Warden Slocum. The Warden asked him if he wished to return to his quarters. Mr. Stokes replied, I merely wished to trouble you for a moment to light my cigar.

Mr. Stokes concluded by again assuring the reporter that it would be impolitic for him to say anything further, and he hoped that the reporter would not attribute his reticence to indifference.

At 7 o'clock last evening, Stokes was reported to be in a better physical condition, and more calm and composed in mind. Miss Constock, a relative, and a number of his intimate friends called upon him during the afternoon. He was visited by his two brothers. The younger brother had a long interview with his unfortunate relative, and left him apparently in great distress. About 9 o'clock the doors of all the cells were ordered to be double locked, and Superintendent Kelso and Inspector Jameson, with a large force of police, were present in the prison.

Moral of the Murder.

[From the Boston Post]

To recite in detail the whole story of the recent tragedy in New York, what led to this fatal culmination of revengeful passion, and how the various parties concerned were drawn into the vortex of violence and death, is to reopen a shocking scandal from which pretty recitals, and to parade a mass of ghastly particulars that cannot but insensibly corrupt and demoralize the purer sentiments of the reader. The almost regular repetition of these startling occurrences has become an unenviable characteristic of New York, whose manifestations may be predicted with a fair certainty. We are accustomed to speak of the Empire in France as steeped in sin and crowned with crimes against society; but the morals of the Empire appear almost spotless in comparison with those of New York, where human iniquity seems perpetually tasked to invent new forms for publicly outraging the sense of decency and security together. In France, a desecrated sepulchre was rigidly observed, as if from sheer respect to the society whose supremacy was never disputed; in New York, all apparatus of respectability and even in affected masquerade social intercourse, the most vulgar and unbecoming, are the very thought of a rival or corrective. The almost voracious protests raised against such a condition of things by the country at large have hitherto availed nothing to impress that city with a sense even of shame. The glittering bubble breaks, and the charn of its chase is over. There was the powerful fascination of the empire of Erie with its millions tossing this way and that, like the leaves of a windmill, and the bold contest with the power of the United States Treasury. There was the intense passion for display, at the Park, on the Avenue, by the seaside. There were opera houses with their bewilderments of dancing girls; restaurants with their high animal spirits, a wide circle of friends, excitement without limit, and an influence that swept in its wake from New York to the Capital, to the Mississippi, to London. And a sudden deed terminates all with silence, unrelieved save by the audible calls for the swift punishment of a guilty criminal whose violent hand wrought the marvellous change. The scene shifts in an instant, and to all this glitter, pomp, and show, succeeds the gloom of the midday death-bed, as if its occupant had been hurried from the engrossing excitement of his high-strung life to this relentless reality of fate. The solemn drawing of the last will and testament; the whispered consultations of the physicians; the business partner, overwhelmed with anxiety and grief; the weeping sister; the wife who had hastened to the scene; the painful silence of the hall and along the hotel passages; the suspense of the crowds that blocked the outside entrances—these form a terribly sharp contrast to the previous scene of the life of the man whose business and men, and though shocking in its nature, is the result of an extraordinary personal career, possible perhaps in no other man than where its acts were so recently laid.

Interesting Temperance Gathering.

The great tide of moral reform which seems to have taken hold of the whole country is making its effects felt here. An earnest, serious, intelligent number of persons, last night, in the City Hall, German St., assembled to witness the installation of the officers of the Albany Division, which, though not the largest of the Temperance bodies in point of numbers, appears to be one of the most active. Among the prominent gentlemen present we observed Judge H. T. Gilbert, E. Willis, M. P. P. Rev. Mr. Pope, Rev. Mr. Bennett, W. R. M. Burris, W. P. Dole, Andre Chushing, Esquires, Sheriff Harding, Chief of Police H. H. Marshall, G. Armstrong, Esq., of the Globe, Alderman J. G. Forbes and O. D. Wetmore, Esq. The officers were installed by Robert Middlemore, G. W. A.

MR. MARSHALL.

who was installed, made a neat speech in which he took occasion to remark that drunkenness in our midst now was frightfully on the increase. He said he was determined to do all in his power to stop it, and he thought he could effect something.

MR. ARMSTRONG.

of the Globe, next being seated upon by Mr. O. D. Wetmore, who seemed to be lynx eyed enough to see all the good looking men present, called on Mr. A. for a speech, who, rising, remarked that sodden had been his good fortune to see such a good looking body of men, and that he sympathized with the cause that brought them together, and could say that never was action more needed than at present in our city. He said he was very glad to see the officers of the Albany Division installed, and congratulated the Temperance body on the progress it is making. He had never before been at an installation, but was so pleased with what he saw and heard that he would exert his utmost efforts in dealing vigorously with the evil when brought to his notice.

JUDGE GILBERT.

was pleased and gratified to be able to be there, and congratulated the Temperance body on the progress it is making. He had never before been at an installation, but was so pleased with what he saw and heard that he would exert his utmost efforts in dealing vigorously with the evil when brought to his notice.

MR. CHISHOLM, ESQ.

made some sensible, well-timed, and otherwise appropriate remarks. He had always been a Temperance man; remembered the Old Washingtonian movement, and spoke of the pleasure the progress of Temperance gave him. He urged, as the true solution of the difficulty, legal action against the evil; such a pitch has the liquor traffic reached that it should be taken charge of by the law like any other nuisance or dangerous article, and indicted and crushed out by all means. Mr. Chushing's earnest remarks were cordially received.

MR. POTTIS.

made a lively speech. He said, years ago, when he had said the Temperance cause was not received support from the clergy, the Christian Visitor had abused him to the extent of a column. Times had changed now, but still the necessity for united public action was as great as ever.

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Mr. Martin spoke some encouraging words, and the Rev. Mr. Pope made a lengthy, effective, and eloquent speech. Mr. Hawker spoke briefly, and Mr. Dole said the impressions he had received from his early experience had made him resolve never to leave the Temperance body. The Rev. Mr. Bennett made a few witty remarks, and with this closed the speeches. The whole proceedings were characterized by an earnestness which forbodes an active Temperance campaign, and the men who have the matter in hand are quite able to bring some good out of what they undertake.

Loss by Saturday's Gale.

The schooner "Cuba" was blown over to the Nova Scotia coast in the gale of Saturday night last and lost her anchors and chains. The "Cuba" is owned in St. George by J. A. Moran, Esq., and others.

Meeting of Sessions.

A Special Session of the Peace, to consider matters remaining over from the December General Sessions, will be held at the Court House, on Tuesday, 16th inst., at ten o'clock a. m.

The School Trusteeship.

Mr. McDonough, who was appointed Trustee in the place of Mr. Furlong, whose resignation was sent into the Common Council yesterday, repudiates the whole business, and had no idea whatever that Mr. Rowan would have nominated him. What's going to be done about it? Going to Chicago.

During the last few days a large number of persons from the North Shore (we heard of one party of at least fourteen) masons, carpenters, etc., have passed through St. John en route for Chicago, where they propose to assist in rebuilding the burnt city. Mechanics of this description are needed in our own City at present.

Exports from St. John.

The following is a correct statement of the Exports from St. John, for the quarter ending December 31:—

Produce of the Mines, $ 1,431

Ferries, 30,788

Animals and their Products, 385,373

Agricultural Products, 18,202

Miscellaneous Articles, 5,316

Total Goods Produce Canada, $577,876

Total Goods not Produce Canada, 283,223

Grand Total, $861,099

The Libel Case.

The Forbes-Anglin Libel Suit is still occupying the Circuit Court. A large number of witnesses will be examined, among them the Western Extension Railway Directors, the members of the Common Council, and probably some statistical and financial experts. Mr. Duff had Mr. Forbes under cross examination all the forenoon. With the volubility common to the legal fraternity on the witness stand, Mr. Duff, with veteran experience, keeps him to the point. The evidence this forenoon all related to the meeting of the Common Council on the day to which Mr. Anglin referred in the article on which the libel suit is brought.

Your Honor, being a native of this province and formerly a resident of this county, comes among us in your official capacity for the first time since your appointment, not as a stranger, but as one in whom the inhabitants of this part of the province have had at all times warm and friendly interest. And we, the Grand Jurors, have great pleasure in this occasion to bear testimony to the manly course, zeal and integrity, which have marked the discharge of your Honor's professional duties while at the Bar in advocating the interest of your clients as well as in your official duties as the late Attorney General of this Province, and from your Honor's long experience and legal attainments, we feel the judiciary of this province has received an ordinary acquisition in your promotion. For the discharge of those highly important and responsible duties attached to your Honor's high position, and for which your Honor is so unhesitatingly qualified, we hope and trust you may be long spared.

S. W. PALMER, Foreman.

Dated Grand Jury Room.

Dorchester, Jan. 9, 1872.

Judge Wetmore made the following reply:—

Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury for the County of Westmorland, I thank you for your congratulatory and friendly remarks on my first visit in a judicial character to your County, the more particularly from the kind way you refer to my residence among you many years ago and the warm and friendly interest the people of this part of the County have at all times felt towards me. Be assured, gentlemen, that when I look back to the time I spent in this County I reflect upon some of the very happiest days of my life.

I also thank you for your approval of the manner in which I have discharged my professional duties, and those appertaining to the office of Her Majesty's Attorney General of this Province while I had the honor of holding that office.

I thank you also for your very complimentary remarks on my probable competency as one of the Judges of the land, and however I may fail in the rendering of service to your County, in the administration of the laws of the land, I will not be far from what is the most earnest exertion on my part faithfully to discharge the duties of my high and distinguished office to which I had the honor of being appointed.

Your obedient servant,

A. R. WETMORE.

Dorchester Court House, 9th Jan., 1872.

To Stephen W. Palmer, Esq., Foreman, and the Grand Jury of the County of Westmorland.

Rothschilds School Trustees.

Today the Rothschilds rate-payers elected Messrs. S. S. Hall, Marks and Richard Tinsley, Trustees; and authorized an assessment of $2,000 for a building, $300 for land and $800 for the support of the School for the ensuing year. Proceedings
