WHEN NAPOLEON WALKED. An Incident of the Memorable Re-treat From Moscow.

It was on Nov. 25, at about 7 o'clock orning, when we saw the head The first we saw were generals, a few of whom were on horse-back, but the majority on foot. The latter painfully dragged themselves along, almost all having their feet frosee and bound up in rags and pieces of sheepskin and dying of hunger We then saw what was left of the cavalry of the guard. The emperor came next on foot, with a stick in his hand. He was muffled up in a large capote lined fur and wore on his head an with for and wore on his head an amaraghine velvet cap edged with black foxskin. On his right marched, also on foot, King Murat; on his left, Prince Eugene, viceroy of Italy; then Marshals Berthier, prince of Neufchatel; Ney, Mortier, Lefebvre and other marshals and generals, whose corps had been partly destroyed.

They were followed by 700 to 800

officers and subofficers, marching in order and bearing in the greatest silence eagles of the regiments to which they had belonged and that had so often led them to victory They were the remnant of over 60,000 men My poor Picart, who had not seen the army for a month, gazed on silently but his con-vulsive movements showed only too vements showed only too well what he felt I saw big tears roll down the cheeks and fall on his mustache, from which icicles were hanging. Then, turning to me. Really, ing. Then, turning to me, 'Reall' compatriot, I do not know whether compatriot, I do not surely ampassive at a sleep or awake; I weep because I have seen our emperor marching on foot, a stick in his band, he that was so great and who made us so proud!"

There is not much caste or class dis-tinction in Siberia, and the few social rules are lax. The Russian Siberians mingle freely with the native tribes, and their customs and habits have, in ience, been considerably modi fled. I have often seen groups of boys playing on the street where the Kirghiz or Buriat boys were mixed indiscrim-inately with the Russians. From their dress or language it was impossible to distinguish them, for both costume a language were a strange mixture. Only the peculiar features of the native or the more slovenly appearance of the Russian would betray the slightest dif-ference. It is an old saying that you "scratch a Russian and find a Tartar." It might be more appropriately saidat least, of the Russian peasant-that you scrape the dirt off a Russian and find a clean Tartar, for the latter are decidedly the more cleanly.—St. Nich-

HENRY J. BYRON.

The Famous Wit Started In to Have Some Fun With the Dramatist, but Found In the End That He Had Met His Match at Chaffing.

The Francis Will Statefed Is to Bave State and were being slowly drawn award the mouth of the pit when I saw the old rope was about to snap under the strain. It was a perilous, a horrible, a critical moment. The weight of two men was too great, and your father was a broad, bulky man. Self preservation is the first law of nature. An instant more and we were both lost. We seemed to be about 50 feet from the top. I hastily called your father's attention to something-implored I fact, to look down the mine. He did so, and as I gently tipped him over he went whirling and crashing to the bottom. It was rough on him, but I saved my-self. I ciphered it-out on the instant like this: He is an old man, nearly like this: He is an old man, hearly bald, deaf in one ear, two teeth gone in front, with only a few years to live. I am half his age, strong and healthy, the father of a young family, with a career before me, a comedy to finish for the Hay,market and a burlesque accepted at the Strand. Now, I ask you, under the given years, did I not behave der the circumstances, did I not behave nobly?"

"You did, you did!" sobbed Artemus. "I would have acted that way myself." "I am glad to find you so intelligent.

"I am glad to find you so intelligent. You ate my brother and found him tough, and I am the assassin of your dear old father," continued Byron, keeping up the farce of pretended emotion. "We are both avenged. Let us draw a veil over the past and nevel allude to these heartrending incidents "Agreed. We cry quits. Shake!" bear that? Isn't it awful?"

Togred Artemus, extending both hands and dramatically dashing a flood of imaginary tears from his eyes. Then he summoned a waiter, glasses round were speedily ordered, and everybody was full of congratulations upon the ready man-ner in which the two wits had conducted their impromptu chaff.—Exchange

The Intellect Not Indicated by the Weight, Convolutions or the Amount of Gray Matter That is

but even when the size of the cavity within affords little clew to the amount of matter therein. Except in rare cases of disease, says Dr. Simms, the brain does not it the skull. It is surrounded by three membranes and a watery fluid.

If the weight of a man's brain indicates anything at all, it is more likely to tell his nationality and birthplace than how gifted he is. It has been noted in tables of brain weighte that odd northern countries produce bigger brains than warm, tropical ones do. The largest average is attained in Scotland.

in Scotland.

Another popular error is the supposition that large convolutions and deep and tortucus passages between the subdivisions of a brain betray superior power. Certain rodents, like the beaver, evince a high order of intelligence and engineering skill, and yet their brains are devoid of convolutions. Again, the whale has a larger brain, which is divided by deep fissures, but the creature's mental power is insignificant compared with man's. Even the elephant, intelligent as it is, cannot be ranked above man, and yet its brain is nificant compared with man's. Even the slephant, intelligent as it is, cannot be ranked above man, and yet its brain is larger than the human brain, and the fissures in it are much more complicated. A theory that has been received with considerable favor relates to the coating of gray matter that overlies the brain and dips down into the fissures. This substance, also known as the "cortex," has been supposed to be the seat of the highest order of mental action, and mental capacity has therefore been measured by the thickness of the cortical layer. That such estimates are unwarranted is the positive conviction of Dr. Simms. He presents only a little evidence on this point, but that little is of a striking character. The average thickness of the gray matter is one-fifth of an inch. But in Daniel Webster there was only one-sixteenth of an inch, less than one-third of the normal amount. In many of the lower animals and in persons below the average in intelligence a thicker cortex has been found than in Webster's brain.

The writer in The Popular Science Monthly is thus led to remark, "None of the suppositions about certain qualities of mind inhering in particular portions of the brain have been proved, nor have they stood the tests of selence."

SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE RESTORES REST

If the digestive organs refuse to do their work, indigestion and dyspepsia follow like lightning's flash—the nerves are shattered and then insomnia runs riot, and the patient is on the road to the mad-house or insane gsylum. A well known Torotto newspaper man was a victim of nervous prostration and insomnia through overwork—retiring at night was more of a dread than a wel-come to rest—prejudiced against medicines and remedies, be spurned the thought of resorting to what he called nostrums—he became aimost incapacitated for work—he was recommended to try South American Nervine, procured a bottle and when half of it had been taken, he found himself improving—sleep was induced, the nerves grew quieter, the appetite returned—he continued to take the remedy until he had used six bottles, and at the end of that time the twenty pounds he had lost in worry and for want of rest was put on again—to-day he says, "I feel strong enough to do two days work in one."

South American Nervine is without a peer in the cure of nervousness, indigestion and insomnia. A few doses will convince the most sceptical. It gives immediate relief and effects a cure in every case. Strong as this statement as seem it is absolutely true.
