

President; for Her Majesty's Government cannot but think that if such acts are to take place by the sole direction of subordinate officers, and the President does not disavow them, the consequences must be as evil as if the President had authorized them from the beginning.

I have, &c.
(Signed) LYONS.
