Brockville Cheese Board. BROCKVILLE, July 22.—The cheese market shows a steady tendency, but before the close developed unusual briskness. Bids were first held at 8c and 8 1/2c, with a few sales at the latter price. The choice lots were being held for 9c, and the remainder of the market was being bought by them they were not slow in making the advance of another sixteenth. The offerings were 5,000 boxes, of which 1,700 were white. Sales were: 660 boxes at 8 1/2c; 1,713 at 8c. Not registered, sold on the street at 8c.

The board discussed the recent action of certain buyers exporting Quebec cheese as Brockville's, and passed a resolution empowering a committee to procure a sample of the cheese for the Brockville district, which will stop such forgery in the future. Their Sanity Questioned. The Montreal Star of the 16th inst. says:—Herbert E. Randall and Thomas A. Beane, evangelists, were yesterday committed by Judge Dugas for instance to their sanity. At the instance of Mr. Chas. J. Chisholm, the police arrested them on a charge of creating a disturbance by their religious ranting at 2464 St. Catherine street, near Mountain street. Both pleaded guilty, and Randall said "The Spirit" had prompted them to pray aloud. He solemnly assured the judge that he had ample reasons for his conduct, and he would not be deterred by the command to raise their voices in supplication. Randall called himself a pastor, but he was never regularly ordained. The new religion, he called the Holiness Movement, and Rev. R. C. Hornor, of Ottawa, he described as its founder.

Randall was formerly a telegraph operator in the C. P. R. office at Ottawa. He claims to have a dozen men and women converts in Montreal. The police declared that the noise made by these converts was so loud that it was heard in the street.

After eight days imprisonment the evangelists were brought before Judge Dugas, when Deacon Shields, of Ottawa, appeared and said that he had arranged and said that the prisoners were prepared to keep the peace.

The judge, addressing them, said:—"I don't think your religion, so far as it permits howling, should be encouraged. Remember, I don't permit you to interfere with your beliefs or your consciences. That you committed a nuisance has been proven, and you yourselves have pleaded guilty." After denouncing the conduct of a clergyman who had written to the press in favor of the prisoners at Montreal, he said:—"All the evidence goes to show that you acted like lunatics. It is all right to pray, but as for barking, that is another story. I will put you each under bond for $200 in yourselves and another surety of $300 each to observe the peace for six months, and will besides sentence each of you to six hours imprisonment in goal."

Dog-gone Hard Luck. A couple of farmers living not a thousand miles from the thriving hamlet of Sopotan, both of whose christian names begin with George, have been troubled very much of late by their mischievous dogs, who have been eating their sheep. A week or so ago one of the Georges had a sheep killed outright and the two neighbors counselled together as to the best means to get rid of the death-dealing canine. After discussing the matter they decided that the surest way would be to procure a trap large enough to hold any animal that should get its toes between the jaws, and a trip was made to a neighboring settlement where they knew of a man who was reported to have one of the best-time bear traps, and from him one was obtained for the occasion. The old trapper gave them minute directions as to the manner of setting the old relic of bygone days, especially as one of the newcomers was a native of another across the seas whose bears and other wild animals are unknown to him. He advised that, instead of driving a stake into the ground, a clog be attached to the chain in order to give the animal a chance to pull the trap around, which would tighten its grasp and prevent an escape. The farmers went home elated, set the trap close to the carcass of the dead sheep, loaded up an old Snider-Enfield rifle, and agreeing on a signal to be given when the animal was taken, the smaller George shouldered his gun and went home. Along in the "wax hours" of the next morning a piece of music from the tin snare was heard, and the signal was given. The signal agreed upon was given and little George, with gun on shoulder, and the other George with a blue-beech sled stake in hand, started for the scene. The night was dark, and they could locate the captured animal only by its pitiful lamentations. Arriving in the vicinity, a council of war was held and it was decided to not use the gun except in case of extreme necessity, for fear of awakening the owner of the dog. The gun was set up against the fence and while one George skirmished around to locate the game, the other stood close to the fence with club upraised and awaited the approach of the thing of the trap. A wail of the blue beech, and the sudden bounding of the trailing clog in the air was all that little George saw of the transaction. The dog in his efforts to escape ran along the fence, and the other George caught up against the loaded gun leaning against the fence it was upset and discharged. The dog and trap disappeared in the distance, and may be going yet for all the two Georges know to the contrary.
