The Supreme Test of a Healing Agent

Psoriasis or Chronic Eczema Defied All Treatment Until Dr. Chase's Ointment Was Used.

After suffering with the terrible itching of Psoriasis for five years, and being told by physicians that she could not be cured, Mrs. Massey turned to Dr. Chase's Ointment, and was entirely cured. You will find this letter interesting, and will not wonder that the writer is enthusiastic in praising this ointment. Mrs. Nettie Massey, Canadian, writes:—I am 47 years of age, and have suffered with what three doctors called psoriasis. They could not help me, and one of them told me if anyone offered to guarantee a cure for the disease, I would accept it. I can hardly praise this ointment enough. Can you imagine a more severe test for Dr. Chase's Ointment? This should convince you that it is a cure for eczema and all forms of itching skin disease. Dr. Chase's Ointment stands supreme. Put it to the test. Get a box, all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

At Last.

By JOHN GREENLEAF WRITERS.
When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from mountain spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling,
My feet to paths unknown,
Those who have made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
Oh Love divine, O Helpers ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Baths, sky, home pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting,
The love which answers mine.
I have but Thee, O Father! Let Thy spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold,
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
No street of shining gold.
And both forgotten though Thy abounding
grace—
I find room for hands familiar beckoned
Unto a fitting place.
Some humble door among the many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving
And flows forever through earth's green expansions.
The river of Thy peace.
There from the music round about me stealing
I hail would learn that new and holy song,
And find, at last, beneath the trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

A Synopsis of 'Four Seasons in the Garden.'

By HENRY B. REYNOLDS.

MAKING AND CARE OF THE GARDEN.

In improving the home grounds the first thing to be considered is the making of the lawn; then flower beds may be made and shrubs planted for permanent effect. The first thing to do is to grade the ground evenly, making the earth as flat and mellow as possible. The soil if not rich should be made so; he advises the use of some manure in preference to barn yard fertilizer, because the latter is apt to bring in weed seeds. Bone meal in the proportion of half a pound to each square yard of ordinary soil, will make a good growth of grass. A good quality of lawn grass seed should be used. Mixtures made for the purpose are much better than a person could make himself. Advice concerning this can be found in the next column. The grass seed should be sown thick; the proper time for sowing the seed is on a still damp day. Seed will germinate in four or five days; in a month the soil will be hidden by the grass. It should not be cut for the first time until it is six inches tall. Never cut too close as it spoils the effect, twice a week being enough to use the lawn mower. Grass needs to be fed well to do its best. Fertilizer should be applied in spring and again in August.

FLOWER BEDS: THEIR MAKE AND CARE.

The best place for flower beds is at one side of the house, well back to wards the rear. If it is not possible then near the house along the walls, keeping the lawn intact. Beds near the house should be reserved for annuals and low-growing perennials, as a general thing, though tall growing sorts can often be planted with fine effect in nooks or corners or against a wall.

Bulbs can be planted in those beds reserved for annuals. They will be done flowering before it is time to plant the annuals. This can be done without disturbing the bulbs. Every garden should have bulbs. They like a deep, rich, mellow soil, which also suits the annuals. They should be planted in September or October as they need to make roots in the fall. Hyacinths, Tulips, Daffodils, also other Narcissus, Crocus and Snow drop are specially advised. In addition to annuals he advises the liberal use of Pansies, also of Tea Roses. Plant hardy perennials along the sides of the home lot. They will hide the fence, if there is one, and set off the beauty of the lawn. To secure the best results, low growing plants should be placed next the street, gradually increasing the height of the border as it recedes, thus bringing the tallest plants at the sides of the home and well to the rear.

For shrubbery, groups of Spiraea, Hydrangea, Lilac in variety, Syringa, Weigelia and Halesia are advised. A few good shrubs are much to be preferred to a large number of inferior ones. Small grounds cannot accommodate many large shrubs. Allow for growth and future development. Roses are best planted by themselves. My special subject is Hardy Perennial Plants, so I will proceed to give some of Mr. Reynolds' ideas on them. They are more satisfactory to the busy person who has not much time for gardening as they require the least care. Once planted they are good for years. Some bloom early in the season, some in midsummer and some in the fall.

For early blossoming I would advise the Dicentra (Bleeding Heart), the Peony and the Lily of the Valley. A little later come the herbaceous Spirea, followed by Larkspurs and early Phlox, then Hollyhocks, Rudbeckia (Golden Glow) and the later varieties of Phlox.

Shrubs and perennials can be planted in spring or fall. Spring planting should not be done until the ground is in good condition. If fall planting is most convenient do it as soon as the foliage is ripened, allowing the plants to get established before winter.

Perennials grown from seed will not bloom the first year, with a few exceptions. Some wild flowers, native plants and shrubs are very fine for decorating the home grounds. Use the White Flowered Rider, the Samash, Viburnum or High Bush Huckleberry, the Golden Rod and Aster in a corner of their own; Thalictrum or Meadow Rue, which is a very beautiful plant in foliage and flower, Ceanothus, Pampas or Virginia Bower, a climber, Aspidistra or Virginia Creeper, Bitter Sweet, Daywood, Shadblow and some others not known here.

Ferns can be transplanted satisfactorily. Take them up with a good deal of earth adhering to the roots; wrap each one in stout paper as soon as lifted and set in a deep basket, applying water to saturate the roots. Plant after sunset, shade well and shower frequently. All native plants grow more luxuriantly with cultivation.

To grow Dahlias well give them a very rich soil and plenty of water. It is not necessary to start them early, provide most stakes to tie them up as their stalks are easily broken. After the frost has killed the leaves let them remain on in the ground. Along the latter part of October dig them up, wash each bulb carefully, shaking off the soil, and lay them on boards in the sun. Do not remove the stalks at this time. Cover the roots well at night. Expose them to the sun for several days if the weather is favorable. After the earth has all crumbled away out of the stalks, three or four inches from the roots, and put them in the cellar where they will be safe from damp and frost.

Transplanting shrubs disturb the roots as little as possible. Keep the roots covered with wet sack or reserved for annuals. If any are mutilated trim off smoothly. Have the hole dug large enough to allow for a natural disposal of the roots. After filling in with fine soil, water well. All transplanted shrubs should be sharply pruned, about a third of the old wood being removed. All shrubs are better for some protection about the roots in winter.

The Editor's Tribulations.

It costs a newspaper money every time it takes a stand on any question. Almost any citizen besides a newspaper man can do it without injuring his business. If the editor advocates improvements the sore heads go after him and sometimes atop their paper. If he opposes improvements the progressive sort get on to him and call him a back number and a knocker. If he publishes politics the opposition gets into his hair, and if he does not he is charged with being afraid to stand out with his opinion. If he condemns mail order houses, there are some people who ask him to attend to his own business, as they have a right to trade where they please. If he publishes a mail order advertisement some of these merchants are after his gore. No country paper can come out squarely without making enemies and losing money, and in the run of a year or more will receive some criticism from everybody. The newspaper that undertakes to please everybody will please nobody; if it is honest, sincere and thoughtful, the public will respect it.

Starvation or Merciless Torture.

A choice between starvation or merciless torture is the dismal prospect before all victims of indigestion, for, although they are in need of food to nourish the body, they are afraid to eat because of the pangs and discomfort that follow even the slightest of meals.

The urgent need of all who suffer from indigestion is to gain strength so that the stomach can extract nourishment from the food taken. Pain after eating is the way the stomach signifies its protest that it is too weak to do nature's work. To take purgatives is only to aggravate the trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give new strength to weak stomachs because they enrich and purify the blood supply thus enabling the stomach to digest food as usual. All must from the first the appetite re- vives; then food can be taken without pain and the burden of indigestion disappears.

The following case proves the truth of these statements. Mr. W. H. Silver, a well known farmer living in the vicinity of Hen- fard, N. B., says: "For upwards of twenty years I have suffered with indigestion; sometimes I was so bad that I could hardly sleep at night. I tried various prescriptions, but got no benefit from them, and naturally I was in a very reduced state of health. I had come to believe that I was doomed for the balance of my life to this most constant torture, when I read of a case similar to my own. I bought a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These gave me new courage and I decided to try them. To make a long story short, the use of the Pills for a couple of months completely cured me. This is some two years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble, and am able to eat as heartily a meal as anyone."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through your medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Army of the Dead.

I dreamed that overhead I saw in the twilight grey The Army of the Dead Marching upon its way. So still and passionless, With faces so serene, That scarcely could one guess Such men in war had been. No mark of hurt they bore, Nor smoke, nor bloody stain; Nor suffered any more. Famine, fatigue, or pain; Nor any lust of hate. Nor lingered in their eyes— Who have fulfilled their fate Have lost all enmity. A new and greater pride So quenched the pride of race That loes march side by side. Who once fought face to face. That ghostly army's plan I know but one race, one rod— All nations there are Mas. And the one King is God. No anger on their cars. See bugle's summons fall; Beyond these tangled spheres The Archangel's trumpet calls; And by that trumpet led For up the exalted sky The Army of the Dead Goes by and still goes by— Look upward standing mute; Salute!

Mistress—Your name, Mary, and my daughter's being the same makes matters somewhat confusing.

Country Doctor (Superintendent of Sunday School)—Now, child, who can tell me what we must do in order to get to Heaven?
Bright Boy—We must die.
Country Doctor—Quite right, but what must we do before we die?
Bright Boy—Get sick and send for you.

Sergeant—"By, there! Where are you going?"
The Absent minded Beggar (who had slipped out of the trench)—"Oh, Jemmy! When that 'blissin' shell whistled over 'ead it thought it was twelve o'clock!"
