The New Woman Not In It.

With all her freaks and fads the "New Woman" does not commence to cojoy the same comfort with her mannish clothing that a man does. For she will almost all ways sacrifice comfort for style and effect, while with a man comfort comes first. Men's suits and overcoats admit of such few changes in style that the main question is to get a becoming color and, for severe weather, to make them warm enough without too much bulk or weight. And here men take advantage of the many feminine appropriations of their styles and borrow the invaluable Fibre Chamois on which such extensive sleeves are safely built, using it in winter coats and vest of the sake of the healthful warmth it for the sake of the healthful warmth it of the sake of th
