Rev. Dr. Lyle, Rev. Dr. Williamson and Rev. J. K. Unsworth have been in Toronto during the past week attending the Union Committee meetings. The committee did not finish its work before Tuesday night next. It is expected that matters will then be in such a shape that a digest can be sent to all the lower courts of the churches for their approval er rejection.

NOT ANTAGONISTIC TO POLICE.

Private Detective Huckle is still working on the Elsie Ashburn case. He says he has no ill feeling towards the police; in fact, his questions at the last session were to show that the police should have a fund to enable them to better handle such cases. There are some points which he purposes bringing out, even though unpleasant questions have to be asked.

Toronto Sturday Night:—While the position of the banks is probably beter than a liw weeks ago, extreme caution is still the or to the day. Loans on steeks are as difficult to negotiate as ever, as banks are nursing their reserves in anticipation of the crop moving season. The prices of securities, while steady in many cases show no disposition to advance. This kind of speculation is not encouraged, and an immediate prospect of a rise is one of the things not considered at the present time. An upward movemen, is stock depends solely upon the money market which is still averse to such a movement. It is not even a question of which we have the considered in the prices of many stocks and good ones, too, both Canadian and United States. Miniature Dogs.

Given a boom to the toy dog pet craze, the Western Australian desert would prove a small El Dorado. In the course of an expedition to look for a practical stock route between the northern pastoral lands and the central gold fields, the party found large numbers of a tiny animal of the dog tribe, no bigger than a rat. The natives eat-it greedily.

Institutional Instruction

There is a sharply defined difference between the pupil educated in a large musical institution and one taught by a private individual. The latter invariably shows the stigma of insufficient training, of ma of insufficient training, of lack of breadth. His taste is not developed, the result of not hearing enough good music; he lacks surety, confi-dence and self-reliance when appearing in public.

On the other hand, the in-stitutional student has the mingling with his fellow stu-dents and the hearing of numerous concerts and lectures, which bring knowledge and polish, and he is also made reliable and confident by frereliable and confident by frequent efforts in recitals. There is also the not-to-bedefined atmosphere of a large conservatory of music. This atmosphere adds a great stimulus in that wholesome competitive spirit so essential to bring to the front the student's best effort.
