Madeira, the Blessed.

We knew nothing about Madeira except what the little prospectus toid us, and the day before arrival we began to look up guide-book information on the subject. There was not much of this on the ship; I suspect there is not much anywhere. Madeira was known to the Ploencicians, of course, that race of people who knew everything, went everywhere, built all the first cities, invented all the arts, named everything, and then perished. I ought to be sorry, I suppose, but I'm not I've heard enough of that perished. I ought to be sorry, I suppose, but I'm not. I've heard enough of that tribe on this ship.

There is no trace of the Phoenicians, I believe, on Madeira to-day and the early history of the island is mainly mythical. When ancient Mediterraiean sailors went evideria, a little into the early history of the island is mainly mythical. When ancient Mediterraican sailors went exploring a little into the Atlantic and saw its purple form arise on the horizon they decided that it must be the mouth of hell, or at all events the abode of evil creatures, and hastily turned back. One account says that in the course of time a gentleman named Texicab—probably the inventor of the vehicle later known by that name—and his companion were shipwrecked on Madeira and set up a monument, but about the same time it was discovered again by a Portuguese named Zargo, who set it afire as a means of clearing the land of its splendid forests and kept the fires going for seven years.

It is one of the fairest spots an earth. When we drew near enough to see its trraced hills—lofty hills they are, some of them in the interior rising to a point six thousand feet above the sea—and to in the supplement of them.

When we drew near enough to see its trraced hills—lofty hills they are, some of them in the interior rising to a point six thousand feet above the sea—and to make out the tiny houses nestling like white and tinted shells against the green, we changed our minds about being willing to sail past without stopping and when at last we swung slowly into the harbor of Funchal we felt somehow that we had come upon an island enchantment in the middle of the sea.

For everything was so marvelous in its beauty, the gorges between the little fairy city just where the hills flow into the sea. With glasses one could make out flowering vines on, many of the walls. Even with the naked eye, somebody presently discovered a great purple mass part way us the hillside. The glass showed it to be a louse almost covered with bougainvillea—our first vision of this lavish and spleudid flower of the Mediterranean.—From "The Ship-Dwellers," by Albert Bigelow Paine, in the Outing Magazine for September.

FOREST FIRES

Disastrous Blaze in Washington an Idaho States.

Ranchers Burned Out-Timber Wealth Swept Away.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 24.—The forest fire on the east side of the Pend d'Or-ville River, Wash., is still burning. ville River, Wash, is still burning.

The fires in the vicinity of Port Hill, Idaho, near the Canadian border, are stubborn. Several ranchers and timber owners have had their holdings swept away. Little headway has been made in stopping the fires in the vicinity of Naples, and great areas of timber are burning. The losses in that section will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

An immense fire is raging at China Creek in the vicinity of Deer Park. Forest rangers are unsuccessful in fighting it, and it must burn itself out.

My Best Portrait of a Lady.

My Best Portrait of a Lady.

Under the title of "My Best Portrait of a Lady," the September Strand Magazine publishes a symposium of leading portrait painters of the world. The article is accompanied by reproductions of the pictures which the various painters select as their best portraits.

The portrait selected by M. Haverman, of Holland, is, quite naturally, a Dutch subject, who, we are informed, is "the daughter of a Dutch settler in one of Holland's colonies in the East Indies."

A lady of exalted rank, the Empress of Russia, has been awarded the palm for beauty by Herr F. von Kaulbach, who enjoye in Germany an exceptional reputation for the portraiture of both men and women.

choice of the portrait of Mrs. H. C. Marillier, which he describes as "one of his least unsuccessful efforts to depict the charm of a very pretty woman."

M. Jan Van Beers, the celebrated Parisian painter of beautiful women, pays England the compliment of selecting the portrait of one of his English sitters for reproduction—Lady Michelham to wit, a well-known figure in London society.

The Spanish painter, Signor Ignacio Zuloaga, has gone to the stage for the sitter he has most admired. Mile, Lucienne Breval, the lady in question, is one of the leading artistes in the Paris Opera. Senor Zuloaga has painted ber in the character of Carmen. It is in the aecond act of the opera, when Carmen is laughing vivaciously and using all the fascination of her eyes.

The lady upon whom has fallen the choice of M. Emilie Wauters, the celebrated Belgian portrait painter, is the Comtesse de Montesquiou Fezenasac. Born the Comtesse d'Aramon, she is connected with some of the oldest families in France and Belgium. "She is very petite," says the artist in describing the lady, "with very dark eyes, having a most animated and intelligent expression."

Taking these portraits as a whole they display a most striking catholic ity of artistic taste and the widest possible diversity in the type of beauty represented.

Duke of Abruzzi's Exploration of of "Mountains of the Moon".

Mr. Edward Whymper's narrative entitled "The Exploits of the Duke of the Abruzzi" is continued in the September Abruzzi' is continued in the September Wide World Magazine. In this instalment, Mr. Whymper takes the reader from the Artic regions to the Equator, the object of the Duke being to explore the "Mountains of the Moon."

Schoolboys of the last generation, says he, used to hear a good deal about the "Mountains of the Moon." The appellation has disappeared from modern geographical text-books, and is replaced by Ruwenzori was first seen in modern times by Stanley on May 24th, 1888. He recognized it as a single snowy mountain rather than as a range, and estimated its distance from him to be seventy miles. The Duke always takes an adequate staff for the operations he proposes to carry out. He believes in his compatriots, and on this ourney Italians alone were employed. In all the party consisted of eleven persons.

On starting from Entebbe the caravan had grown to three hundred porters and assistants. The march was made in fifteen days. When about five-sixths of it had een accomplished, they got their first view of Ruwenzori, still a long way off.

Duongoio, twelve thousand four hun-

Duongolo, twelve thousand four hundred and sixty feet, was made headquarters. Bujongolo was conviently situated but yielded rather cold quarters for the porters. This had been foreseen, and flannels and blankets were distributed among them. 'They had great difficulty in putting them on, and their long and ludicrous attempts generally resulted in frantic efforts to squeeze their legs into sleeves of the woollen vests.'

The temperatures experienced on the The temperatures experienced on the summits of the Equatorial snowcapped summits of the Equatorial snowcapped peaks were by no means severe. They were seldom much beneath the freezing point. The lowest (23.4 degrees F.), seems to have occurred on June 18th, upon Peak Margherita. At Bujongolo it generally fell to 33 or 34 degrees F. Lat night. The frequent mists were a much greater obstacle than the cold. The ascents made in the Ruwenzori range are not to be compared in difficulty with the ascent of Mount St. Elias. Both the peaks and their glaciers are comparatively small. It is now the Duke's intention to scale the Himalayas. He is still young, having been born at Madrid on January 29th, 1873, and so has only just entered his thirty-seventh year. On the "Roof of the World" there is space enough for him to eclipse his conquest of the "Mountains of the Moon."

ARE POISONERS.

Modern Housewives Are Veritable Lucretia Borgias, Says Wiley.

New York, Aug. 24.-Modern house wives are veritable Lucretia Borgias, de-clared Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, head of the United States Chemistry Bureau, who is here to attend the National Convention of Pure Food and Dairy Commis

"The modern Lucretia," he said, "hands out poison from the ice box, from the broiler and the skillet and the little tins of dinner she buys when breathlessly rushing home after her exciting bridge games at the club.

"It is the duty of every housewife to inform herself on the laws of hygiene. The average ice box is a charnel house, which not only holds death, but spreads it. And too many housekeepers allow disorder and uncleanliness to prevail in their kitchen and larders through ignorance or indifference.

"They would rather pick out a Beethoven sonata, read an Ibsen play or memorize a bridge rule than trace a ptomaine to its lair and eradicate it in the interest of family safety." 'The modern Lucretia," he said,

GERMANY'S FUTURE.

"Militarism," says Dr. E. J. Dillon, "is the mother of Socialism." And he proceeds to show how the German military burdens are giving a great impetus to Socialism and contributing to bring about an impending change.

Doubtless the new taxes will weigh heavily on the people, poor and rich, and transform financial into political cares and grievances. This would be the case at the best of times, for the standard of living in the Fatherland is considerably below the standard of living in Great Britain. But the result will be more intense, more painful now than in average times because of the unusual depression felt almost everywhere, but more especially among the working men, more especially among the working men, tens of thousands of whom are without tens of thousands of whom are without employment. These people are being aroused from the torpor of generations. The blow dealt them has come, they are told, from the region of politics. To the region of politics they accordingly turn, eager to strike back. People who never before spent a thought on matters political are now becoming members of democratic or socialist parties. A new pensants' league confronts the old landowners' association; the latter day Hansa League recently founded for the purpose of withstanding the reactionary policy of the Agrarians and turthering the interests of trade and industry, is enrolling members by the thousand; and other signs are numerous of the coming struggle of the masses for those full political rights which they have been vainly expecting for nearly forty years.
