A General Survey.

During the lull in the flow of information from the war theatre in France and Belgium, it may not be amiss to make a general survey of the war in its many theatres, scattered throughout the world. In the Pacific German Samoa, German New Guinea, and the Caroline Islands have been seized. Sieges are also being laid to the German capital and port at Kia Chou in China. These operations are being conducted by the Japanese with the assistance of British white and Indian troops. As the fortifications are strong, somewhat like those of the Russian fortifications at Port Arthur before the Russo-Japanese war, it was announced before operations began that they would be long and tedious and no news of a decisive character was to be looked for until towards the end of November. Of course, the Germans are isolated and can bring no support to their garrison there, and there is every likelihood before Xmas comes that this German Province will be in possession of the Allies. At the time the war commenced the Pacific and the Indian Oceans were, however, the least guarded by British cruisers. The Germans had four cruisers there. Two were large and powerful, the Gneisenau and the Scharnhorst. The tonnage of each was 11,420 and they were armed with eight 8.2 inch and six 5.9 inch guns. These appear to be in the South Pacific. Last week we heard of their depredations at Papeete, a part of the French Society Islands. They appear to have left the North Pacific to put plenty of sea room between them and the Japanese Navy, which has undertaken to keep clear the sea way between the Far East and British Columbia, and so far as our information goes they appear to be doing it. The other two, the Leipzig and Emden, have made for the Indian Ocean where they have done some damage to shipping. Madras and Zanzibar have had a visit. At the latter place a small British cruiser was destroyed. They have however not been able to interrupt the transport of troops either to France or to the East Coast of Africa, or of troops from New Zealand or Australia. The most formidable unit the British had in these waters at the commencement of the war was the battle cruiser Australia, which is able to dispose of all the four Germans should she come up to them either singly or together. Her tonnage is 18,800, and she carries eight 12-inch and sixteen four-inch guns, and has a speed of 23 knots. The British cruiser has in all probability been too busy conveying troops to go in search of them. A force of British white troops, Indian troops and probably black troops is being organized to seize German East Africa. As to German South West Africa, the South African Union troops under General Botha will look after it. German Togoland and the German Cameroons have already been seized. Last week we heard of a great haul of German shipping being made in the Cameroons, and quite early in the campaign the wireless station of Togoland was seized. From these indications it seems likely that before Christmas Germany will not have a colony left. Her wireless stations will have been taken and when the contingents from India and the Colonies have been safely conveyed, the German cruisers now at large will be hunted down. Already they appear to have been driven out of the North Atlantic and the North Pacific. So far we have heard of no German cruisers breaking through the blockade of the Heligoland Bight or of that of the mouth of the Baltic. Turning to Europe, we find the Mediterranean a closed sea to our enemies. The Austrian fleet, after some losses, said to include one of her finest battle ships, is bottled up in her naval harbors, one of which is being reduced by bombardment. On the land Herzegovina has been overrun by the Montenegrins and the latter and the Serbians have seized much of the territory of Bosnia, and are now approaching the capital, Sarajevo. The Serbians have also captured Semlin, an important town opposite Belgrade, on the left bank of the Drina. The Russians have taken the province of

"Not dirge, but proud farewell," accompanied the sweetest singer of our time to the verge of the river of death, across which he taught the eyes to discern, amid the gloom of the valley of the dark shadow, the far-off gleam of the new life of immortal love.

BLIND.
"Mid all the chaos have you seen
One gleam, one light of a star?"
And the woman answered: "No, not one,
Though I have gazed near and far."
"But not one word for calm, sure speech?
There is surely that somewhere."
But the woman answered: "When I pray
'Tis the stutter of despair."

"Look! On the far world-margin gleams
"The Dawn that is Victory!"
But the woman said: "My eyes are blind,
I am bent and cannot see."

"Hearken, the very hour is here
White Peace has been bought at last."
But the woman said: "How many slain,
And how many souls have passed?"
"Ah, but the world is better now,
Men say it is true and plain."
The woman murmured: "Whose heart was hurt
When you paid for Progress Pain?"
"People are sobered, cleansed, made pure,
War has wrought its work complete."
But the woman said: "When passed you by
"The Sign of the Bruised Feet?"
"But there must needs be tragedy;
No lesser thing has sufficed."
The woman murmured: "O blind, O blind,
To the Tragedy of Christ!"

Bukovina, and the greater part of Galicia, and have also made a descent through the Carpathian Mountains on Hungary. They have invested Przemyśl and have the main line of their forces extending from Cracow, through Czesochowa to Kalisz. For some days past we have heard nothing of what is taking place along this line. This is one of the most important lines of contest for on this fight depends much. It is along this line that the Russians have most of their forces, and opposed to them is a gigantic army of Germans and Austrians. The fight here will influence largely the fortune of the war in France and Belgium. Should Russia be successful in breaking German and Austrian resistance here, the Germans must withdraw from France and Belgium to meet the hordes of the Russians. Antwerp is apparently cut off from communication with Ostend, but whether the Germans are trying seriously to capture Antwerp is not clear. They may be bombarding and attacking as a demonstration to hinder the army in Antwerp assisting the allies further south. In the latter place there seems to be little chance of success, as the Germans are their line further north and eastwards and though at points the advance guards may be driven back, the Germans can only do it by weakening their line on the Aisne. In France, the allies turning movement seems to be progressing slowly but surely. The Russians report success in driving the German invaders out of the provinces of Swalki and Lomaha and claim a great victory at Augustowo.
