WOMAN FIGHTS LION

Mastiff, Succeeds in Killing the Fierce Brute. Owingsville, Ky., July 6. - News reached here today of a desperate encounter in the mountains of Lesley county between what is said to have been a huge mountain lion and Mrs. Martha Miller, a young widow. Mrs. Miller, accompanied by her dog, a big mastiff, was walking along a lonely mountain pike, when with a growl big beast sprang upon her. Mrs. Miller was knocked to the ground by the sudden attack, but she scrambled to her feet and grasped a branch of a tree lying near. With this she began beating the attacking animal, at same time calling her dog to her aid. Then the animal sprang again, this time sinking his teeth in the woman's neck and shoulder, terribly lacerating her. Battling for her life, Mrs. Miller struck the animal again and again finally forcing it to loosen its grasp upon her. Then the dog attacked the beast, and after a hard battle sucin fastening its teeth in its throat, killing it. Mrs. Miller is badly injured, but will recover. The dog's flesh was torn to ribbons.

J., performed a hasty marriage ceremony in the face of many obstacles and a pair of enraged parents early yesterday mornwas awakened by heavy thumping on ried down, and had no more than opened the door when a young couple ourst in and begged him to marry them at once, because, as the young woman explained, "Mamma and papa are coming in a buckboard, and they will be here in a minute." Mr. Newson suggested that they give him time to exchange his pajamas for street clothes, but the young couple clung to his arms and begged him not to go until the knot had been tied. "Listen," said the young woman; 'don't you hear them coming?" listening, Mr. Newson certainly did hear the pounding of horses' hoofs and the rattle of a buckboard. So he did not hesitate, but in the hall, lit only by the moon, he recited the Methodist ritual, and the young woman had just said "Yes" when the buckboard stopped in front of the door and an irate, middle-aged couple bounded up the walk.

Mr. Newson was equal to the occasion, and stepping out on the stoop he extended his hand to the man, saying, "I am sorry you didn't get here in time. You are just too late for the ceremony, but at least you can give them your parental blessing. "Blessing be blanked," said the fond
