The Way Made Clear.

A change from the left to the right ing change in the point of view of Mr. Whitney and his supporters. New Ontario will be no longer the land of the stunted poplar, as Mr. Whitney called net is not a member of the Legislature it, but a precious asset. The new Gov- yet. Mr. Whitney will have to look ernment will take up its predecessor's outside if he wants a strong ministry. plans for the development of the territory to the north, and endeavor to carry them out. The settlers, who voted overwhelmingly against the late administration, will not be given all the pine on their land, as they were led to understand. They will find no material change in the rules and regulations of the crown lands department. The sale of the pine timber, which was once denounced as a waste of the capital of the Province, will be conducted in the same manner as before. There will be no embargo on nickel matte, in order to compel all the refining processes to be carried on in Canada, as advocated by Gamey. There will be no removal of the embargo on pulpwood cut on crown lands, as promised the settlers by some politicians. There will be no annullment of the agreement between the late Government and the reorganized Lake Superior Company, by means of which the great Soo industries were restored to life. The Temiscaming Railway project will be pushed to a completion, and colonization roads will be built much the same as before.

It is highly probable, also, that the Conservative party will now take a more cheerful view of Provincial finances. It will find the surplus is burg he has set the provinces aflame. not a myth, but as real as in John Sandfield Macdonald's day. The specter of direct taxation will no longer affright us. Although our Conservative friends were sure that the Province was sinking into a quagmire of debt, they will extricate it without any appreciable reduction of expenditure. The new taxes on the corporations against which Mr. Whitney declaimed, will remain as they are. The succession duties, which he and his lieutenants deplored as a species of confiscation, will not be abolished. The share of the revenue from liquor licenses taken by the Province will not be restored to the municipalities. The cost of maintaining the public institutions will not be curtailed, and all the opened yesterday. Old trappers living asylum supplies will not be purchased along the great marshes of the Black-by tender. And so with every department of Provincial administration. There will be no immediate changes unless for the worse. New conditions may have to be met by new methods, but the Conservative party will find at present nothing to reform. The Liberal party has been a faithful steward for 32 years, and to its political heirs and assigns hands over the public estate unencumbered. The new Government will spare itself and the Province trouble by following the lines of policy marked out by the retiring administration.

Affairs in the Old Land.

The extreme distress in England a the present time is in a great measure the outcome of the Boer war. During the war, the expenditure of many millions of pounds of borrowed money gave an impetus to trade and industry "Quite so. And the doctor has and created an artificial prosperity. bill like that of a pelican." gave an impetus to trade and industry But the return of thousands of reservists and volunteers from South Africa caused a sudden glut of the labor market, and the cessation of war expenditures added to the army of the unemployed. The depression was intensified by the great increase of taxation. The country is suffering from the inevitable reaction of every costly war, and, as usual, a political reaction sets in concurrently. The present Government was swept into power by the "khaki issue," but the people no longer dance to the same tune, now that they have to pay the piper. The Chamberlainites endeavor to make political capital out of the prevailing depression, but the bye-election results indicate that the people have a clear perception of cause and effect, and are not misled by the cry that the fiscal policy of the country is the root of the evil. Fortunately a recovery is beginning, and it is expectedly that before spring is over normal conditions will have been

The Government has declared that i will not go to the country so long as it retains the confidence of the vouse of Commons. Its majority is still .arge and reliable. The life of the present Parliament will not expire till the autumn of 1907. Apparently the Government can, if it so decides, mark time for another two years. In the interval it can continue to feel the public pulse and watch the progress or the recession of the Chamberlain movement. The fiscal controversy is raging unabated. Mr. Chamberlain has powerful interests behind him, including many wealthy manufacturers, who are looking for tariff favors, and the entire London press, with two or three exceptions. Possessing the sinews of war, he will continue to fight, but the trend is against him just now. In this country interest in the struggle is more languid than ever. The Chamberlainites and Liberals in the mother country vehemently assert and deny that the colonies are with Mr. Chamberlain. The answer of Canadians is "yes" and "no." If Great Britain adopts the Chamberlain policy, Canada for one, will meet her half way, But Canada does not presume to dictate to Great Britain, and scorns the suggestion that her loyalty depends upon the decision arrived at by the British people. Canadians give the mother country a free hand in the mat. ter, and whatever she does will be considered as her own business, not

The season for trapping muskrats, Mr. Haverson Says It Was Because of His Attitude on Temperance Question.

> Toronto, Jan. 28. - Mr. James Haverson, solicitor of the License Victuallers' Association, in an interview here today said:

"The liquor interests as a whole voted against the Ross Government because of the attitude of Mr. Ross and his party. The Globe continually asserted that the Liberal party was the temperance party; that it alone had passed all the temperance legislation that had been enacted, and was the only party that would pass any such egislation, and that it was useless for he temperance party to look to Mr. Whitney for anything more than the license act. This was the Premier's manifesto to the temperance people Taking the Globe and the Premier on tion, and for that reason the 1905 their own statements, there was nothing else for the liquor trade to do than to vote against the Government, the temperance people voted for Mr. Whitney, which I very much doubt, they were moved by feelings of vengeneance. The liquor trade was animated by no such motive or feeling. It was a business proposition and what might reasonably be expected. The traditions of the Conservative party are not against the liquor party, we surely have some reason to believe Mr. Whitney when he says that his policy is the license act well enforced. Let me just say that, whatever else may be said against the Ross Government, the Ross Administration cannot be charged that they did not enforce the liquor license act, which is as well enforced and as well observed as any law on the statute books, and those who assert to the contrary don't know what they are

Gould showed to the children some of WILL ROAM SEAS FOR ENEMY

Navy To Be Divided Into Red and Blue Divisions, the Former Posing as Foreign Power.

London, Jan. 30.-The British admiralty has issued a "general idea" of the coming summer's naval maneuvers, which will be a prelude to those of 1906, and are an entirely new departure in the naval operations of marine war. The aim of the great oceanic tournament is to test the strategic efficiency of the new distribution of the fleets, which formed an essential part of the recent organization scheme. A state of war as wide in its area as the whole of the sta-tions of the British fleet will be developed after a preparatory period of strained relations, and it will rest with the main battle fleets and their affiliated cruiser squadrons to demonstrate how far they can maintain the eminion of the sea.

In the face of a mobile and elusive enemy the strategic proposition laid down by the admiralty clearly recognizes the principle that any naval war to be successful must be one o prompt aggression by Great Britain. as British maneuvers of re cent years have been for testing the efficiency of the fleet and for the training of men, up till now they never have been carried out with s lose a representation of an actual situation on the ever of a foreseen war tion of battleships during diplomatic; as will be the case this year.
