IN THE POLICE COURT

Samuel Vickory had a unique excuse to offer to Police Magistrate Judd this morning when he appeared, charged with being drunk and disorderly.

Michael Aniskick was trespassing on the C. P. R. shortly before midnight Monday night. He told the court that he was in search of work, but a statement to the C. P. R. constable, who arrested him, to the effect that he wanted to get to Toronto, was taken in preference to his story.

Three boys, who appeared on Friday on a charge of stealing beer from a Michigan Central car and who were remanded until this morning for sentence, were allowed to go on suspended sentence, after bonds of $200 each had been furnished by their parents for their appearance in court at any time they are called upon.

John Reave rode his bicycle on the sidewalk and paid $1 for the pleasure, and John Mann paid a like amount for committing a breach of the traffic by-law.

Charles Doxstader, an Indian who has made frequent appearances in court on charges of being drunk, was again this morning. In answer to a query as to why he secured the liquor, he repeated the old familiar story about a colored man, whom he did not know, presenting to him a bottle of beer.

These recommendations were adopted and handed over to the judiciary committee with instructions to send a copy to President Wilson, the members of Congress, and to the governors of the different states. The judiciary committee was also empowered to invite to state associations to take appropriate action to give effect to these resolutions.
