MY&UNCLE'S WILL:

(From Temple Bar.)
My uncle was a millionare, and rejoiced in the euphonious name of Smith. My elder brother had been named as his heir and I was sent to Japan and placed in a mercantile house to work out my own salvation. I worked diligently for five years at this pursuit, at the end of which time I received a letter from my uncle's family larger announcing the death of that relative, and notifying me that I was amed as his sole heir, my brother having been disinherited on account of a mesal-liance he had contracted. I was somewhat dismayed at the condi-I was somewhat dismayed at the condition of my inheritance, which was that I must marry my cousin Cecelia Brooke, a young lady I had never seen and scarcely heard of, otherwise the whole of the vast estate would be distributed among the charities. However, as I was heart whole, I resolved to make the best of it; and proceeded to shed a tear at my uncle's memory, and started home.

Having plenty of funds and time at my disposal I prosecuted my journey slowly, visiting on my way every place of interest on the continent.

and I was gazing, spelbound by her beauty, when he door opened, and Mr. Capel appeared on the threshold.

"Par ion my intrusion, Miss Brooke; the servant told me you were alone," he said, and then stopped, mute with astonishment, on seeing me.
"This isn't Miss Brooke, but my intended, you, Cissie. This is my lawyer, Mr. Capel," I said. They bowed to each other—Mr. Capel with a most mystified expression of coun-

"Am I dreaming, Miss Brooke?" he said at last.
"I ought to have told you before, Harold.
I meant to have told you just now. Mrs.

whom I was travelling with. She wished me to pass as her niece on our journeys, but my real name is Brooke. Can you forgive my not having told thi, even to you?" she said.

The whole truth flashed upon me at once. Could I forgive her, indeed! Why, I covered her rosy cheeks with kisses then, bringing tears to the eyes of the lawyer by the warmth with which I grasped his hand.

to myself a fat, dairy-maid sort of girl!" 1 cried in glee.
"Shall I still have you for a client?" said

Mr. Capel, with a roguish twinkle in his eye. "I think you may trust his affection, Miss Brooke; for he intended to resign all claim to one of the finest estates in Eng-land to enable him to marry you," he added.

"I don't know whether to put that construction on it or not," replied Cissie, archly, "It is also true that he was willing to surrender that estate rather than marry his cousin—and I am that cousin."

I replied by again covering her blushing his cousin—and I am that cousin."

I replied by again covering her blushing face with kisses.

It was not till years had elapsed, and Lockhart and the pretty widow were married, and were on a visit to our happy home, that I learned that it was all a putup job on the part of the lawyer, Lockhart, the widow and Cissie. They were afraid I would be as great a fool as my brother and fall in love with the first pretty face I met, so they took care that Cissie's should be that face.

Lieutenant Danenhower.
Lieut. John W. Danenhower, the hero of the Jeannette expedition who is expected to arrive in America about June 1, was born in Chicago, September 30, 1849. In "My travelling companion was a wealthy young Euglishman, named Lockhart, who knew everybody worth knowing, and who introduced me into the best society. At Manheim we fell in with a widow lady and her niece, whom Lockhart had met in Eugland, and claiming them for our country women, we soon became fast friends, travelled with them to Heidelberg and took rooms at the same hotel.

The year 1000, he entered the late of 1870. Soon after he went to Europe and South America. He was on the Vandalia in the Mediterranean with Gen. Grant on his trip around the world, who was favorably impressed with his knowledge of navigation and skill as an officer, and when he learned that Mr. Bennett was equipping the Jeannette for an arctic expedition he solicited him to the year 1866, he entered the naval academy
