A Speculation In Sperm

How the Disabling of the Nancy Gigg Brought Good Fortune to a Sailor

By PAUL C. SCHAFER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

As long as there is a sperm or a right whale left wallowing in the seven seas I presume there will sail out of New Bedford a few round belled, bluff bowed old brigs, as awkward as Chinese junks, but sailed by men who usually would be quite capable of getting around this round world safely on a log of lignum vitae.

Had the master of the Nancy Gigg not been taken seriously ill just as she was filling the last of her 4,000 barrels of sperm and gone home by steamship from Fayal this tale would not have been written, and John Pepper would like enough be knocking about the world somewhere tonight in the fo'castle of a wind jammer or at best holding the tiller of second mate.

Instead he is running a comfortable ship chandlery business on South street, all the result of what looked at the time like a knockout blow from fate.

John and four other men were incapacitated by what whalemen, in ignorance of proper medical terms, call salt water blisters and were landed from the Sunbeam at Fayal when she put in there with her catch.

She was out for three years. Only half the time was up, and the five invalids could not draw a cent of pay until the ship returned to New Bedford and the owners settled with all hands.

Well, they might have starved on the beaches, only that is impossible in Fayal. They did, however, have a hard time of it until they fell in with men from the Nancy Gigg.

The brig was sitting out for home, but she was a little short handed. During the two years and a half since drifting out of New Bedford harbor

Under the circumstances, she could not long keep her decks above water; yet it seemed to him as though now that she was driving steadily before the gale, the Nancy Gigg was not very far down in the water.

He went to the rail and measured the distance between the rollers as best he could.

His companions were pretty silent, but somebody suggested tearing off the main hatch and making a raft of that.

"You'll have the brig filled then in no time," Pepper said.

"And what matter?" was the demand. "She's bound to go down anyway. Eight feet of water made in half an hour or so means that there's a hole in her big enough to drive an ox team through, or else every plank in her bottom is sprung."

"I dunno," said Pepper. "Let's try the pumps."

"An' try an' pump the whole bloomin' Atlantic through her!" they cried, and cursed him soundly for a fool.

So John Pepper went at it alone. He coupled on the pumps, and he worked the heavy brakes himself. It wasn't a minute before he had a stream the full size of the pipe squirting across the deck.

John looked at this and stopped pumping. He went down on his hands and knees and smelled of the overflow from the pipe. Then he tasted it. Then for a long time he squatted there on the pitching deck of the brig and thought.

By and by he went back to his shivering comrades in the galley, where the cook had left a fire.

"Got enough of it, did you?" said they. "Is she settling fast?"

"No, she doesn't settle much," said Pepper slowly.

"Well, let's turn to and knock together some kind of a raft," one of the men said. "The old ship's bound to sink soon anyhow, so we can't be much worse off."

"Perhaps," said Pepper, "and then again perhaps not. If I'll show you fellows how this brig can be saved and brought into port, providing something worse don't happen to her than has happened already, will you agree for me to have half the salvage, you four to divide the other half between you?"

They stared at him in amazement. One muttered: "He's off his chump. It's turned the man's head."

"I'm sane," said Pepper. "I saw the pump roll!" cried one.

"So did I," Pepper returned.

"It was wet full eight feet."

"So it was, but not with water."

The quartet stared at him blankly.

"When the brig broached to," Pepper continued, "the barrels of sperm must ha' got adrift. There's hundreds of 'em smashed, and the hold is flooded with oil. That's what comes through the pipes, and it's what wet the sounding rod. The old brig's as sound as a dollar yet."

Every man of the four had to see the pure oil spurting from the pumps before he could believe Pepper's statement. But at the sight they all plucked up heart.

They were battered a deal by the wind, for gale followed gale for twenty-seven days. Then the Nancy Gigg was nearer the Azores again than the American coast.

So under Pepper's directions an improvised gear was rigged, and thus, steering by "pulley haul" they worked her into Fayal, and Pepper went ashore and told their story to the American consul.

Well, the owners fought the case and tried to make out that the five were members of the Nancy Gigg's crew, and therefore it was their duty to save her if possible, but finally Pepper and his friends won. There probably hasn't been a speculation in sperm oil made in half a century that came out so well for the speculators.

And if you can find John Pepper's shop on South street and drop in some rainy day when business is dull he'll tell you all about it.

Why She Didn't Enjoy Her Vacation

She started finding fault with the place the moment she arrived and was never satisfied.

She went to a boarding house and refused to be friendly with any one. But she was annoyed when not included in the excursions that the others got up. She forgot that if we want to be on friendly terms with strangers we must be prepared to meet them halfway.

She went to a more expensive place than she really could afford and was annoyed because she could not dress as well or spend as much as the other guests.

She was so anxious to see everything there was to be seen in the neighborhood that she rushed far too much and at the end of her holiday had only the most confused idea of the places she had visited.

She was never willing to do what the others wanted to do and made herself thoroughly disagreeable if she couldn't get her own way.

She was always noticing the little ways in which she thought people neglected her instead of the many in which they helped to make her enjoy herself.

When little things were wrong she looked as grim as if a terrible catastrophe had happened. She had never learned to smile at trivial mishaps.

She blamed her companions and the weather when she found she wasn't enjoying herself, forgetting that to be happy "inside" is the surest way to be independent of both.

She thought too much about the fact that the holidays would soon be over—so much, indeed, that she forgot to enjoy what was still left.

She expected too much. Instead of trying to make other people happy she thought that they ought to be devoting themselves to her.

THE TRAVELER'S VEIL

Many Styles Shown For the Vacationist Who Likes to Be Neat.

Veils are well nigh indispensable to the traveler, and the wise woman has a fresh veil in her dressing bag to supplement the one she is wearing.

The new fine veillings might have been specially designed for the traveler, so admirably do they suit her purpose.

They keep her neat, preserve the complexion and hair from dust and grime yet do not unduly obstruct the sight.

These fine veillings are sometimes woven with a single tiny lace motif at one side, and very pretty this looks when the veil is adroitly arranged over the face.

Very attractive veils for motoring of chiffon, with squares or circles of shadow lace set in to cover the face, are sold in the shops at varying prices.

These are infinitely more comfortable than the all chiffon veil, which clings uncomfortably to the face in warm weather, and they are infinitely more useful than an all lace veil for country drives, when the lace veil is hardly adequate in case of wind or dust.

No man or woman should hobble painfully about because of corns when so certain a relief is at hand as Holway's Corn Cure.
