Middleton Notes.

Building operations are still being actively pushed forward. J. H. Young has the foundation completed for a large double house opposite the post office. It is to contain two stores on the first floor. He is also having the Dr. Harding house moved this week. The new bottling shop near the station, being built by Geo. Smith, lessee of the Wilmot Spa Springs Co.'s works, is about finished outside. It is a fine appearing two-story building with a flat roof, and ought to be well adapted to the use for which it is intended. The residences of Dr. Andrews, I. W. Whitman, George Armstrong and P. S. Marshall are nearly completed, and will be occupied in a short time.

Congratulations are in order to Editor Cox, who is the first of the bachelor editors of the county to see the error of his ways. His marriage to Miss Madge Shaw, of Avonport, took place at the bride's home on Saturday last. They will return on Wednesday and occupy the Hennigar house on Main street during the winter.

Congratulations also to Councillor Vroom, who goes back to the Council without opposition and with the approval and best wishes of the electors of the Ward on both sides of politics.

A fire broke out in the residence belonging to Mr. Stephen Oikle at about four o'clock on Sunday morning the 3rd. The family sere sleeping, and it was with great difficulty that they were aroused in time to escape with their lives. The people of this community sympathize with Mr. Oikle. He is a very industrious man and had been strung gling to clear his property from debt and had about finished paying for it. We understand that the fire burned up nearly all the farming implements, and the years supply of food. The family are in sore need of help.

After the feast the lord mayor toasted the ministers and Lord Salisbury arose to respond. He touched briefly upon the result of the recent general election. The nation, he said, had spoken in terms that could not be mistaken. In reference to home rule, he augured a period of peace as regards the integrity of the empire.

Just now the chief interests was in foreign affairs. He alluded to the Chinese-Japanese war, which he said had been followed with great interest, but those matters are now past, and he trusted peace had returned. "Depend upon it," he said, "whatever may happen in that region, be it in the way of war or in the way of commerce, we are equal to any competition that may be opposed to us, and may look with equal absolute equanimity of persons who think to exclude us from that fertile and commerciaregion, or who imagine if we are admitted they can beat us in the markets of the world. That Pledge Again.

Sir,—I feel reluctant to write anything which is likely to grate harshly upon anysone's feelings, but I can scarcely resist the temptation of giving a little advice to our self-appointed champions of prohibition, who are again seeking to induce people to sign that notorious pledge we heard so much about some months ago. These people profess to believe that it is necessary to exact a cast-iron pledge of all candidates for the municipal connoil, as well as of those for our local and dominion parliaments, in favor of the immediate enactment of a prohibitory liquor law, etc. It seems to me that this pledge is as unnecessary as it is silly and offensive. When did any representative of this county, either in the council or in our parliaments, ever refuse or neglect to aid the temperance cause with his vote and voice when an opportunity offered? Never have our councillors failed in that respect. As the county is under the Scott Act, all the council can do is to appoint an inspector and austain him in the discharge of his duty. And this our councillors have always faithfully done. Again, I have been personally acquainted with every representative this county has had since confederation in both our local and dominion parliaments, and as I review their records I am reminded of the fact that not one of them has ever given a vote against prohibition or to the injury or detriment of the temperance cause. This they have done without pledges and of their own volition. Why should we now declare to our public men that we have lost confidence in them, and cannot any longer trust them unless they give us a mortgage upon their future actions in the shape of a written

He recalled the action in May last of the British, French and Russian ambassadors at Constantinople and declared it was designed to protect the Armenians, whose terrible and deplorable sufferings had moved the feelings of the British nation to their base. He padd at tribute to the skill of the ambassadors, especially Sir Philip Currie, British representative. The demands made on Turkey by the three powers had been substantially accepted by the sultan. He had seen somewhere under a great name the assertion that the sultan had won a great victory over the British. It could not be called victory, Lord Salisbury declared, because he had given the British all they wanted. There has been an impression abroad that he himself had added a demand to those made in May requiring something in the nature of an international commission. That was a great mistake. He never added to the demands. He did offer a substitute demand as a simpler way of obtaining the same end; that if it was preferred, the present Mohammedan machinery should continue and be supervised by a mixed commission. The demands of the embasies were substantially that a proportional number of Christian employees should be added to the executive of the provinces containing a large number of Armenians. He did not contend that his proposal was better. The sultan preferred to the other proposal and this naturally fell to the ground. The reason he preferred to be rid of his proposal to substitute Christian for Moslem officers was his great horror of the powers appearing in these cases a practise of one religion rather than of another. and cannot any longer trust them without exacting of them a mortgage of their honesty in the shape of a written pledge.

If he will not heartly resolve to do justice to them the most ingenious constitution that can be framed will not avail to protect or assist the Armenians. Only through the sultan can any real permanent blessings be conferred on his subjects.

What if the sultan is not persuaded. I am bound to say the news reaching us from Constantinople does not give much cheerfulness in that respect. You will readily on such a matter. It would be dangerous to express opinions that are on my lips lest they injure the cause of peace and good order, which above all things I have at heart. Surpposing the sultan will not give these reforms—what is to follow?

The first answer I should give is that above all treaties, all combinations of the powers, in the nature of things is Providence. God, if you please to put it so, has determined that persistent and constant misgovernment which follows it to its doom. While I readily admit that it is quite possible the sultan, if he likes, can govern with justice and can be persuaded, he is not exempt any more than any other potentate from the law that injustice will bring the highest one on earth to ruin. It is not only the necessary action of the law that injustice will bring the highest one on earth to ruin. It is not only the necessary action of the great powers. Turkey is in the remarkable position that the interest of the sin with which is a subal in the municipality of the great powers. The first answer I should give is that above all threaties, all combinations of the powers, in the nature of things is Providence. God, if you please to put it so, has determined that persistent and constant misgovernment which follows it to its doom. he is not exempt any more than any other potentate from the law that injustice will bring the highest one on earth to ruin. It is not only the necessary action of the law of which I speak on which we may rely. There is the authority of the great powers. Turkey is in the remarkable position that she has now stood in for half a century, mainly because the powers resolved that for the peace of Christendom it was necessary she should have to stand. The danger is that if the Ottoman empire falls it would not be merely the danger that would threaten it territory; it would be the danger that the fire there lit would spread to other nations, involving all that is most powerful and civilized in Europe in a dangerous conflict. Lord Salisbury deprecated indulging in the thing of the powers were never more disposed than now to stand together by the European system they had themselves devised. The danger existed that the sultan should imagine that under the pressure of necessity the adhesion of the powers was such that no abuses in the Ottoman empire would ever receive punishment. It was a great delusion. Lord Salisbury declared he believed the powers were thoroughly resolved to co-operate in everything concerning Turkey. How they would act was not for him to phophesy.

In conclusion, Lord Salisbury said: "Throughout the negotiations nothing was impressed more strongly upon my mind than the disposition of the powers to act together, and their profound sense of the appalling danger any separation in their action might produce. Those among them popularly reputed restless have vied with others in their anxiety to conduct the difficulty to a favorable issue and have conducted themselves in a manner that should better bring all powers into line, moved by the common ambition and noble aim of preserving the peace of Christendom. This is a very cheering symptom. I hope it may be the foundation of a system of action that will last many years to come, and that in this sense of necessary co-operation, imposed by the dangers and evicen I WAS CURED of painful Goitre by MIN-ARD'S LINIMENT.
