maintain a fure Correspondence between the Army and the Cities of Philadelphia, Annapolis, and Williamsburg. But as it was impossible to find Forage beyond the Mountains, before the latter End of April, he refolved not to begin his Expedition till that Time.

In the Interim .no Time was lost: The General had begun with shutting up the Forts, in order, says he, that no Provisions may be carried to the Enemy. To this was added another Advantage, of keeping all Things fecret, while they raifed Recruits, transported the Artillery, and formed Magazines of all necessary Provisions and Munitions. General Braddock and Commodore Keppel continually communicated to each other their Views and Projects: The latter furnished some Cannon, of which the Land-Army had not a sufficient Number. These two principal Men were divided in one fingle Point, which was, how they should treat the French, whom they were quite fure of taking. The King of England had ordered them to be put on board the Fleet and fent to France. M. Keppel, who had not been apprized, but by General Braddock, of that Resolution, found it a very nice Affair. for him. Hitherto he had followed simply the Directions of the Court, yet he was well affured of the Delire of the Nation. He wanted however, to have it in his Power to justify himself, in case the Nation should one Day disapprove of these Violences, so contrary to the Law of Nations, and, therefore, he demanded of the General to fend him positive Orders.

As the Number of the Forces could not be too great with which they intended to fall upon Canada, on the one Hand, the Governors had Orders to receive all French Deserters, to treat them well, and to furnish them with every Thing that they wanted: On the other Hand, Pains were taken to acquaint the Indians on Obio, that the English had no other Design, but to desend them against the Encroachments of the French: And the Governors of the Provinces did not fail to press them to repair to Wills-Greek, on the Frontiers of Virginia.
