France,

France, as between Great-Britain and Spain, as also between either of them and Portugal, notwithstanding whatever may have been stipulated to the contrary by any of the high contracting Parties; And all the said Parties declare, that they will not suffer any Privilege, Favour, or Indulgence to substiff, contrary to the Treaties above confirmed. Thus the Danger, with which the Family Compact menaced our commercial Interests, is, I hope, effectually removed.

To recompence the Restitutions and Cessiz ons made on the Part of France, Great-Britain consents that the Subjects of the most Christian King shall have the Liberty of fishing and drying their Fish on a Part of the Coasts of Newfoundland, agreeably to the 13th Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, and also of fishing in the Gulph of St. Laurence; with this Reserve, that the French shall, in the Exercise of these Fisheries, keep at the Distance of three Leagues from all the Coasts of the Continent, or of the Islands in the Gulph of St. Laurence, and at the Distance of 15 Leagues from the Coasts of the Island of Cape Breton. The Islands of St. Pierre and Miguelon (the former three Miles broad, and the latter fix) are to be ceded to France for the Uses of her Fishery, the most Christian King obliging himfelf upon his royal Word to erect no Fortifications, and to maintain only a small Guard of 50 Men for the Police. — Guadeloupe, Mariegalante,
