Twenty-One Questions.
There were 21 questions on the order paper, and they were taken up first thing. Sir Wilfrid said that the fact that a discriminating duty was exacted on fish and other products of Canada exported to Puerto Rico, in favor of similar United States exports, was entirely a domestic matter, and Canada could do nothing.

Dr. Borden said he had asked the Home land of the Court House. She was a large, fine-looking woman, about 40 years of age, well dressed, and did not appear to be suited for the job she asked for. The Arlington would not accept her services, and for several hours she walked about town making numerous enquiries. About noon she disappeared down G.T.R. tracks, and this morning turned up at Merritton.
