When the Springtime Comes Again!

The snow lies piled in the valleys wild,

It is drifted on the plain,

The streams by the ice are held in a vise,

Till the springtime comes again. But the flowers will bloom in the woodland gloom, The stream will run through shade and sun.
When the springtime comes again.

The grass all green with the dew drops' sheen, Will welcome the laggard rain,
And the rose so red will lift its head,
When the springtime comes again.
