JAPAN'S GROWING TRADE

Washington, Sept. 19.—Consul General Skidmore at Yokohama, in a dispatch to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, says that the export of cotton goods from Japan in the past six months has been unprecedented, the total being nearly twice that of the preceding half year. The increase went mainly to India and Siberia, these two markets now being largely cut off from the English supply, and depending on Japan.

The shipment of cotton goods to foreign markets for the first six months of 1916 amounts in value to $23,415,000, or $10,066,000 more than was exported for the corresponding six months of 1915. The expectation is that the export of cotton goods from Japan will practically double this year.

(Commercial and Financial World.) Japan is probably the most prosperous country in the world at present. Her war munition trade, compared with that of the United States, is small in total value, but every branch of business in Japan is making new records of prosperity.

Financially, Japan was never such a power in the world before. She has redeemed large quantities of Japanese bonds held in Great Britain and France and is preparing to take up $50,000,000 worth of British Treasury bonds in the United States to help out her ally, and incidentally to obtain the five or perhaps six per cent, which England will pay in place of the one and a half per cent. by the Japanese federal banks.

The significant thing about the commercial prosperity of Japan is the way in which it is being used to lay the foundations of future business. Japan is going to be a much more formidable competitor after peace than she was before war.

Cotton spinning, the chief of Japan's internal industries, is in similar condition. Business is on record levels, and while profits and prices have gone up, the wages of the operators are stationary at almost the lowest mark in the world and their efficiency is growing.

The increase of spinners is much greater than the increase of employees. Another distinctive feature of industrial conditions is the number of new industries which have been created through the cessation of German exports. A recent investigation by the department of commerce showed nine new industries in existence as the result of the war. They are:

Dye stuffs (Aniline salts and black dyes); Chemicals (sub-nitrate of bismuth, salicylic acid, antipyrin acetate of calcium and formalin); glass wares; celluloid, paper, pulp, phosphorus, Potassium chloride, and soda.

In view of the enormous demands of the east of cotton clothing the spinning industry is likely to reach gigantic proportions. This prospect of permanence is hailed cotton shares at present more than any others. The export is specially good. Not only are sales to China increasing but Japanese goods are now in possession of Indian and Pacific markets where British and German goods formerly held the field.

There are now in Japan 2,768,000 spindles, owned by thirty-six companies with a capital of $40,000,000 and employing 128,000 work people.

Every year from now on Japan's competition will be felt with great severity in every market on the Pacific. This competition is backed by government support in every form—high protection at home and a policy aimed at preventing the slightest danger from foreign control or even foreign profit-sharing in Japanese industries, and abroad, subsidized steamships, subsidized banks, preferential rates, and not least, a highly organized consular service.

PATRIOTISM
Writing of the resentment generally felt over the burning of the Stars and Stripes in a recent so-called Church service in New York City, the "Wall Street Journal" has this wholesome and eminently quotable sentence: "Thousands are ready to vent their gusty indignation over such a 'desecration of the flag' who are quite as ready to bleed their Government on a contract to promote some pork-grubbing scheme of local expenditure, or help a crook or incompetent into an important office. What has real patriotism to do with it? How do the real interests of the country fare in these Mayor Hayes entertained the members of the assessment commission and the city commissioners at luncheon yesterday at the Union Club.

The last band concert of the season will be given this evening on the King Square band stand by the Temple of Honor Band.

Harold Goguen, a little boy, living at 88 Simonds street fell and badly sprained his ankle last night while playing near his home. He was taken to the general hospital for treatment.

John Crawford, a middle-aged man, fell from the vestibule of a street car last evening about eight o'clock as the car was proceeding along Main street and sustained rather severe scalp wounds. He was carried into G. F. Coupe's drug store and later was removed to the General Public Hospital.

Mayor Church of Toronto, accompanied by J. Ross Robertson of the Toronto Telegram, arrived in the city yesterday on the steamer Empress from England, and left last evening on the Montreal Irish. Mayor Church, speaking of the scenery here, said that if the beauties of the maritime provinces were known in upper Canada many tourists who now go to the states would come here for the summer months.

The orphans of St. John will have a picnic every summer for one hundred years. This was made certain yesterday when J. D. O'Connell of Sussex, who entertained the inmates of the various orphanages at Rockwood Park on Monday, added a codicil to his will, leaving $200 a year for one hundred years for this purpose.

Seaside holidaymakers should bring back with them to the city some silver sand. It is useful for scrubbing kitchen tables, chairs and woodwork.

A scorch made by ironing can be bleached out by soaking in peroxide and letting the spot dry between cloths.
