OUR NEW FELLOW CITIZENS.

A number of skilled Canadians, thoroughly familiar with western life, should go with the English immigrants, who will land here this week and stay with them at Saskatoon giving them aid and counsel in becoming well established in their new home. There is not the least doubt that these people will have to face difficulties they have not expected, and which they are not fitted by training or experience to meet and overcome as it would be done, for example, by settlers from our own province. For that reason and in order that their first impressions of Canada should be the most favorable that are possible, they should be accompanied by a number of skillful and self-reliant Canadians, whose advice would be of the greatest value. It is gratifying to know that careful preparations are being made for their reception here and their transportation to Saskatoon. The English papers will for months to come have long reports of the success or otherwise of this venture, and it is the duty of the government as well as the railway company to see to it that the advertisement the country gets is not of a damaging kind. A great deal depends on the success or otherwise of the Barr colony.

An Ottawa despatch states that the crusade against the stage Irishman has reached that city, and there are threats of trouble for the offending theatrical company. There is such a thing as super-sensitiveness. Nobody accepts the stage Irishman as more than a fun maker, and not any more typical of the race than is the stage Dutchman or Cockney. Our Ottawa friends should restrain their ardor. A very good way to avoid caricature is to refrain from making oneself ridiculous. The Boston Pilot recently said the right thing when it advised those who did not like stage Irishman to stay away from his performance.

An Ottawa despatch says: "The government will probably send down a private car to Fredericton, N. B., to bring the veteran senator, Hon. Mr. Wark, to Ottawa, to discharge his duties as a member of the upper house. This will be a recognition of the exceptional position which Senator Wark occupies by reason of his age and length of service in the senate."

In the provincial legislature yesterday, the discussion of the better terms resolution was continued, and Mr. Hazen's amendment was voted down and the original resolution adopted by a vote of twenty-five to nine. Hon. Messrs. Tweedie, Sweeney and Mr. Jones were appointed a committee to prepare the advice required by the terms of the resolution.

The Chatham World vigorously opposes the proposed Harnsworth pulp mill at the Grand Falls of the Nepisiguit, on the ground that it would destroy the salmon fishery, just as sawmills have done on the Bass, Caraque, Pokemouche and Big and Little Tracadie rivers.

Mr. Davis, M. P., says the Galicians and Doukhobos are rapidly developing into good citizens. He also has selected Chicomilco as an excellent winter port for Canada. Brer Davis' views on the situation on the Balkan will be awaited with breathless interest.

The people of St. John will bear with such degree of equanimity as they may the fact that T. C. Davis, M. P., is not greatly impressed with St. John as a winter port.

The return of Sir Wilfrid Lawson to the British parliament is a guarantee of an occasional "scrap," even if the Nationalist members should continue in a peaceful mood.

The I. C. R. exhibit will unquestionably be a fine advertisement for these provinces, in the New England towns where it will be shown.

The call for aldermanic candidates is still unheeded.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

J. V. Troop & Son received word of the burning of two of their vessels. The barque James W. Etwell was burned on a voyage from Swansea to Valparaiso. The crew escaped in a boat and were in it for twenty-two days, but out of twenty-one persons only three were when picked up, the captain, stewardess and one sailor. The other ship was the Morocco, from Mobile to Liverpool. The crew were picked up by the steamer Moses Day.

Parks & Son started the manufacture of a superior grade of grey cotton.

The following gentlemen were appointed queen's counsel: J. J. Kaye, Wm. Wedderburn, C. N. Skinner, Fred E. Barker, George E. King and C. W. Weldon.

There was a meeting of the New Brunswick Veterans' Association in the rooms of the Foresters' Hall last night, when ten new members joined. Various matters were discussed including among them the matter of the veterans' claim on the province for land grants.

MISS KIDSTON'S CASE.

Believed Former Moncton Girl Will Prove Her Innocence.

BOSTON, April 9.—Many of the officials and newspaper men who have investigated the so-called Roxbury poisoning case have expressed the opinion that it will be almost impossible to convict the former Moncton girl, Miss Christine Taylor Kidston, who is accused of attempting to kill with poisoned coffee Mrs. Cynthia Perkins, the invalid who had employed the girl as a nurse. Miss Kidston in a lengthy statement made in the presence of her lawyer, says she is confident of maintaining her innocence.

(Moncton Times.)

A man named A. S. Kidston lived in Moncton some ten or twelve years ago. He came from Nova Scotia and carried on a small grocery business at the head of Robinson street, and later on Main, but did not prosper and finally left for the United States. He had a family of several children, mostly young, and including girls. The Miss Kidston referred to in the above despatch is probably one of this family.

SPORTING NEWS.

THE RING.

MANAGER COLLINS CONFIDENT.

Manager Collins, of the Boston American Athletic Club, is decidedly optimistic this season. While on his way to Louisville with his bunch of bean eaters, he spoke interestingly of their prospects.

"If," said he, "I cannot come very near then, you know the secret, which I will be willing to quit the game. I haven't a man about whom I have a doubt. Every one of the youngsters promises to round into the best of the fast class. My infield will suit my patrons, I am sure. I would not give my outfield for any in the league, while behind the bat I think I compare favorably with any of them."

In the box I defy the American League to show a better staff than I can present. Yes, I'm pleased, and am willing to stand pat. Of course I realize that I am in fast company and will have some strong propositions to face. But, then, you know the secret, which I will be willing to quit the game. I haven't a man about whom I have a doubt. Every one of the youngsters promises to round into the best of the fast class. My infield will suit my patrons, I am sure. I would not give my outfield for any in the league, while behind the bat I think I compare favorably with any of them."

McCoy WANTS A DIVORCE.

Alexander Lamont was appointed referee by Supreme Court Justice Gledhill in New York to ascertain whether there is sufficient ground for a third divorce between "K" McCoy, the pugilist, and his wife. The wife is in the name of Norman E. Selby, the fighter's real name.

The first two divorces were obtained by Mrs. Selby, and were followed by remarriage. In the present suit, which is brought by Howe & Hummel, the "Kid" names Ralph Thompson, son of a Schenectady banker.

"Last July," said Mr. Hummel, "Mrs. Selby was abroad with Thompson to travel through Europe. Thompson gave him the slip the first opportunity and came back to America, where he joined Mrs. Selby at Saratoga. When Mr. Selby got there, a month later, he found that his wife and Mr. Thompson had gone to Japan."

Mrs. Selby, through Thomas Osborne, denies the accusation.

JOE CHOYNSKI THE EXAMPLE.

Joe Choynski is a living example of what a man can go through in this world when he takes good care of himself. Choynski has been a professional boxer for nearly 15 years, yet he does not show a scar or injury of any kind. His health is of the best, and only once within the last 20 years has he been compelled to stay indoors on account of sickness, and that was last January, when he caught cold after his fight with Peter Maher, and was laid up five days with the grip. Although he has spent the greater part of his life as a professional pugilist, Choynski, at the age of 34, does not look any older than when he was in his prime 10 years ago, and says he is god for many more hard battles in the ring.

"How do you keep your muscles hard?" asked a friend of the big boxer. "That's something I am never troubled with," replied Joe, looking his questioner squarely in the eye. "I don't understand you," said Joe's friend.

Joe then proceeded to give a few valuable pointers on his training methods. "My muscles are not hard," said he. "They never have been and probably never will be. Feel my arm." Joe's arm was examined and the punch for it to be as soft as that of a 16-year-old girl. "Here's where I have developed the muscles," said Joe, pointing to his stomach and chest. He pulled aside his shirt and exposed a row of muscles that looked like a washboard. "They were as hard as iron. Now look at my wrist." Joe pulled up his coat sleeve and exhibited a wrist and forearm that would do justice to any wrestler in the business. "You see I never swing, consequently my biceps are not developed. My blows are all short-arm jolts. When I see my opponent coming I time his punch and counter with a right or left hand blow that does not require much time to land. It's not a swing, but a chop. There is more force to a punch of this kind than a basketful of long swings. I think the most important part of boxing is to know how to judge a punch. Quick to see and quick to act is my motto in fighting as well as in everything else."

Bob Fitzsimmons has always been given credit for being the master of the shift in fighting, but according to Joe Choynski, Brooklyn Jimmy Carroll was the first to use it. Carroll showed it in George LaBlanche, the "Marine," who in turn put Fitz next to it. Choynski says that the shift, although used by famous by Fitz, is really a dub punch and could not be used on a good man. In delivering the blow Fitz changes from one side to the other, and Choynski insists that the time consumed in making the change gives a man plenty of time to avoid being hit. The only man, Choynski claims, who was ever slow enough to get hit with the punch was Jimmie Bullfinch. It was said that Fitzsimmons used the shift on Jim Corbett at Carson City, but Choynski declares that it was simply a left-hand punch in the stomach that sent Corbett down. Corbett was clever to let Fitz hit him with a bum punch like that," said Choynski in speaking of the blow. "If ever you hear of Fitz getting in his alleged shift on any one you can put it down that the man that receives it is a bad excuse for a champion."

GOODMAN AND BRIGGS DRAW.

BOSTON, April 9.—After is drawn of the fastest and cleverest milling that has been seen in this city for a long time, the bout between Jimmy Briggs, of Chelsea, and Kid Goodman, at the Hotel Rutland, was called a draw. It was a good decision. This was the second meeting of these boxers, and their contest last night surpassed their previous ones.
