BOSTON-BERMUDA RACE OFF.

The Boston-Bermuda yacht race which was to have started off Boston, Saturday was declared off on account of lack of entries. H. S. Vanderbilt, the last of the two remaining contestants, withdrew his yacht Vagrant, when the withdrawal of V. L. Carls' Sunshiner left entered only the Vagrant and the sloop Arab. The $500 silver trophy, offered by the city of Boston, was being by the failure of the race. It is probable that it will be offered in the fall for fishermen's races of for some special race for large yachts.

ABOUT OARMEN.

New York Herald.—F. R. Fortmyer, secretary of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, is optimistic over the outlook for this year's championship races at Saratoga Lake, July 28 and 29. The Canadian entries promise to be larger than for many years past. St. Paul, Minn., will be represented by a four and an eight from the Minnesota Boat Club of that city. The New York Athletic Club has more than a dozen strong seniors. In the senior championship for singles, O'Neill of Halifax, N. S. winner in 1909, who was abroad last year, will be on hand.

Marathons, 8; St. Stephen, 5.
Special to The Standard.

St. Stephen, June 15.—On a wet and slippery field the Marathons and Thistles lined up this afternoon for a game that was ended by rain in the last half of the seventh inning. It was as good a ball as could be expected under the circumstances. Maloney and Nelson formed the battery for the Marathons, McGovern caught for the Thistles and Crowley pitched until the fourth inning, when he was replaced by Kyte, who was much more effective. Riley in centre field did especially good work for the visitors. The feature of the game was in the seventh inning when Kyte fanned Riley, Estell and Nelson, the first three men at the bat with only two balls allowed the trio and Nelson got them. The Thistles had two men on bases and one man out when a downpour of rain ended the game. Craft was a satisfactory umpire, with McWha watching bases. The score: Marathons . . . 2023010—8
Thistles . . . 002210—5

WOLGAST AND BROWN IN A LONG RANGE TALKING GO

Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champion of the world, when asked in California recently to tell something about his bouts with Knockout Brown in Philadelphia and New York, did not crack a smile when he declared that he was under a pull due to a fear that he might injure his left arm which was broken last year. Wolgast made it clear that he did not think much of Brown's skill as a pugilist and boldly asserted that if he ever met the light-headed Dutchman again he would knock him out.

"Brown doesn't know the rudiments of boxing," said Wolgast. "He is awkward and green. He is a slugger with a hard wallop, but that lets him out. I got nearly $12,000 for my bouts with him and it was pretty soft in the body. Just to see how hard he could hit I stuck out my jaw and took several swings on the chin without trying to hit back. The blows didn't hurt me and proved that Brown didn't have a knockout punch."

"A lot of rubbish was written about my second bout in New York. They said Brown had me going in one of the early rounds and would have put me out if he had been quick to take advantage. As a matter of fact Brown did rock me with a smash on the jaw, but I was all right in a second or two and covered up to protect myself. If he had been armed with a sledgehammer Brown couldn't have stopped me in that affair, for I had plenty of stamina and knew what I was doing. I thought I beat Brown on that occasion, but the critics didn't agree with me. You see Brown was a sort of public idol in New York at the time and lots of persons thought he was a world beater. But when he couldn't stop Hogan in ten rounds and Murphy beat him honestly on points the New York boxing fans began to get wise. I showed what I can do when I stopped him in a couple of rounds and Murphy explained his subsequent defeat by alleging that he was the victim of a conspiracy."

"Brown is an overrated newspaper champion, and when I get through with Moran I intend to notify Dan Morgan that Brown can have a twenty round match with me right here in Frisco. Then I will put a stop to the discussion over Brown and myself for I'll beat K. O. as sure as there's a Golden Gate. It won't be anything to boast of, for I can name half a dozen lightweights who can take Brown's measure. It will be light then, McFarland, Moran, Britton, Welch, and Pal Moore can beat him in twenty round bouts with decisions. I've nothing personal against

FRANK HARRINGTON WILL GO TO THE PITTSBURG PIRATES

Wire Received Last Night that He Cannot Come to St. John—George Winter, High Priced Toronto Pitcher, may be Secured in His Stead.

Wakefield, Mass., June 15th.

D. B. Donald, St. John, N. B.

Sorry unable to report, Pittsburg orders me to report Thursday.

FRANK HARRINGTON.

The above telegram which was received last night by the manager of the Marathons, represents the latest stage of the efforts of the local ball club to land Frank Harrington as their chief slab artist for the season. Manager Donald had been in communication with the speedy Wakefield man for several days and had accepted the terms on which Harrington agreed to join the Marathons, but he had not received a telegram from him saying that he would leave Boston on Monday morning's boat for St. John. Last night the situation was changed, when the telegram printed above came to hand.

The Pittsburg Pirates have been after Harrington for some time, but in an interview with the Boston Globe on Wednesday, he said he would not follow baseball for a living and intended to go into business. That he has changed his mind is evident from his determination to accept the Pittsburg offer.

Harrington, it will be remembered, pitched for the St. Peter's team last season and was generally regarded as the classiest pitcher seen in this section for a long time. He would have been a tower of strength to the Marathons had it been possible to secure him. While his many friends here regret that he will not be seen in action on a St. John diamond this season, they are nevertheless pleased with the larger opportunity which has opened for him.

The manager of the Marathons is now in communication with George Winter, of Toronto, who was a former member of the Boston team. Winter was offered $1,800 by Toronto this season, but held out for $2,200 with the result that he has not figured in the Eastern league games, but has been playing independent ball. The Marathons had communication with Winter while the negotiations with Harrington were under way, but nothing definite was decided upon. Now that Harrington will be secured, Winter will be secured. He is a very high priced man and should prove a great addition to the team, if they are fortunate enough to land him.

HOW THEY HAVE BEEN SIGNED UP

(Fredericton Glenner). The list of players signed up by each club follows:

The list of players signed up by various clubs to date has been given out, and on the roster of the Marathons appears the name of George Winter, formerly with the Boston and Detroit clubs of the American League and afterwards with Montreal, and this year traded to Toronto, with which club he has declined to play ball.

WAS JOHNNY KLING'S TRADE A FAIR DEAL IN BASEBALL?

JOHN G. KLING

The recent Chicago-Boston deal in selling the catcher John Kling to the Cubs has aroused a great deal of interest among baseball fans. It is a fair deal in baseball? The major leagues should pass stringent rules governing all such transactions in future. Baseball men who have advocated reforms covering such cases say that the rules should plainly state that club owners exchanging players should be compelled to take over contracts made before the championship season begins. It is only fair to the players who sign for the season in good faith that they should receive their salaries in full unless subjected to the usual ten days notice of release.

Kling signed with the Cubs at a salary of $5,000 for six months, when he was traded to the Boston club the other day he asked President Russell if his Chicago contract would be assumed and when informed that the Boston club would pay him at the rate of $3,000 for the campaign, the famous catcher announced that he would not play ball at all. In short the disagreement between Kling and Russell proved a severe blow to the Boston team, inasmuch as the Cubs are secured Graham, the league's best catcher, and three other players, thereby closing the deal. If the Boston club under the rules had been compelled to assume Kling's Chicago contract there would have been no friction and Boston fans would have had no chance to file vehement protests.

There is a growing antipathy to the practice among major league clubs of trading players during the championship season. It is believed that unless waivers are asked on the services of men who are unworthy of further trials no players of recognized ability should change hands except in the off season. It may be all right to buy minor league players during the pennant races, but to weaken a major league team in order to strengthen a possible championship factor is considered impolitic and unsportsmanlike. The Chicago-Boston deal was arranged by Capt. Chance for the sole purpose of increasing the pennant chances of the Cubs. There is no doubt that the Cubs got the better of the trade, but at the same time it is pointed out that "chance" before the season opened was reasonably sure that his team would finish on top.

It is unfair to the New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg teams to have the Cubs strengthened in this manner, yet it is safe to say that all these teams would jump at a chance to make deals of a similar nature. Even now it is said that the Philadelphia club is anxious to secure Mike Doolin to strengthen the outfit, and may hand over a first class pitcher or two to McGraw in exchange. Several
