FAITH WITHOUT WORKS IS DEAD, BEING ALONE.

English people were shocked lately by a series of disgusting revelations made by the Pall Mall Gazette, a high-class evening newspaper of conspicuous ability. It charged many of the aristocracy and moneyed classes of London with crimes of the most filthy and loathsome character. Without mentioning names, it gave details of cases investigated by its own corps of editors and reporters, who have spent a month in visiting the refuges where fallen girls are received, and agencies in various parts of the city at which an abominable traffic is openly carried on. The evidence collected, the journal states, implicates princes, peers, bishops, cabinet members, members of Parliament, judges, barristers, distinguished army officers, and respected merchants. The facts disclosed show that the vices which brought the vengeance of God on the ancient cities of the plain, and which have made the name of Babylon a by-word in history, flourish in the British metropolis, and the guilty parties are men of high social position and influence. Mr. Spurgeon's solemn warning, uttered in his sermon published two weeks ago, indicated that he was aware that moral impurity was rampant, but probably he had no idea of the extent of it. He has written to the "Pall Mall Gazette" to express his approval of the course it has taken in publishing the facts. Public opinion, however, divided as to the wisdom of printing in a paper read by persons of both sexes and all ages the filthy details. It is a significant fact that no one seems to doubt the truth of the revelation. The editor of the journal seems to have expected that the assertions would be questioned, and therefore offered to disclose the names of the guilty parties, with the evidence against them, to a committee composed of the Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Manning, and four representative laymen, who should be pledged to secrecy, but should inform the public whether the charges were substantiated to their satisfaction. The "Pall Mall Gazette" has broken the law against obscene literature in publishing the articles, but it seems to be under no apprehension of prosecution, and it warns the government that if proceedings are commenced against it, it will in self-defence subpoena as witnesses the Prince of Wales and members of both Houses of Parliament. The exposure, it may be hoped, will lead to the enactment of laws for the prevention of the crimes mentioned, which is the object the "Pall Mall Gazette" has in view. We may hope, too, that it will lead to greater vigilance in this country, where, especially in New York, Chicago, and Cincinnati, the state of society is even worse than in London. —(Christian Herald, N. Y.)

FAITH CURES.

Dr. Stanton, a Presbyterian divine of excellent standing in New York, was an earnest advocate of "Faith Cure." He wrote an article on the subject in the Presbyterian Review which attracted much attention at the time.
