Under the German Ban in Alsace and Lorraine.

By M. Betham-Edwards
In this book Miss Betham-Edwards gives her impressions gathered in the course of her travels in the Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. She describes very vividly the longing of the people to be under French rule, owing to their detestation of German tyranny.

The Master Beggars of Belgium.

By L. Cope Cornford
An historical novel which gives a vivid account of the Wars of this Guild of Beggars of the Low Countries against the Spaniards, under the Duke of Alva, during the 16th century.

The above from Wayfarers' Library (new titles issued monthly, 72 now ready). Cloth bound, illus., 4½x7.

Lord Roberts.

By Horace G. Groser
Seldom if ever, in the long and brilliant succession of British commanders has there been one more beloved than Lord Roberts. This little book relates the story of Lord Roberts in early days at Peshawur, the outbreak of the Mutiny, and of his death in France. Cloth, 5¼x7½, 180 pages.

Britain in Arms.

By E. Keble Chatterton
(a) The Regular Army. (b) The Territorial Force. In this book the author has endeavored to bring the anxious man and woman into closer touch with his soldier-brother behind the barrack-gate, where stands the sentry on guard with his glittering bayonet.

Historical Atlas of Europe.

By J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd.
Maps of the Great Battles of the World. An Outline Map of England and Wales. Two extremely interesting outline maps, which illustrate mediaeval and revolutionary Paris. Maps of Europe, etc.

Naval Warfare.

By J. R. Thursfield.
This little book is highly commended to those interested and actively engaged in the Naval Service. The author's name is a household word among all naval officers. (Cambridge Manual.) Cloth, 6½x4½.

Military History.

By the Hon. Fortescue.
This covers a wide scope in a small way of our military history; and if it should set but one student thinking as to the meaning of military history its object will be fully accomplished. (Cambridge Manual.) Cloth, 6½x4½.

The Modern Warship.

By E. L. Attwood.
The frontispiece a photograph of the finished model of H.M.S. Queen Mary. We may make mention of the marine, electrical, and hydraulic engineers and the naval officers who have to navigate, work, and fight the ship. (Cambridge Manual) Cloth, 6½x4½.

From Recruit to Firing-line.

By F. A. M. Webster.
The Recruit. Cavalry. Infantry. The Royal Engineers. The Army Service Corps. Mounted Infantry. Machine-gun Sections. The Soldier's Day in Barracks. Etc., etc. 7¼x4¼—208 pages.

THREE LEADERS 85 cents post paid

The German Enigma.

By Georges Bourdon
Editor Paris Figaro
What Germans think. What they want. What they can do. Cloth, 7½x5¼, 360 pages.

The Nations At War.

By L. Cecil Jane
The Birth of a New Era. A forecast of the political and moral results of the Great European War. The War and International Politics, Imperial Politics, etc. Its conclusions are optimistic. Cloth, 7¼x4½, 230 pages.

Britain's Record.

By F. A. M. Webster
Progress of Liberty, Social Progress, Progress of Commerce, Progress of Science and Learning, Progress of Justice. Cloth, illus., 8x5½, 305 pages.

Stories of Early British Heroes.

By C. G. Hartley
This book relates the story of a little boy called Geoffrey when King Henry I. was reigning in England. It tells of the birth of Brutus; gives his adventures. Relates how he overcomes Corineus. Tells how Humber, the fierce sea-robber, comes to Britain and fights with the sons of Brutus. Cloth, gilt top, illus., 8x5½, 268 pages. $1.40 post-paid.

The Crime of War.

By His Excellency John Baptist Alberdi, LL.D.
The Crime of War is even more interesting at the present moment than when it was written in 1870. It deals with the Historical Law of War, Nature of the Crime of War, the New World Community—One God, One Humanity, One Law. Cloth, 8x5½, 350 pages. $1.60 post-paid.

Salisbury Plain

By Ella Noyes
This book tells of the great tract of Salisbury Plain, and it sets out to give some idea of its natural aspects and of its interests, both in the past and present. The strange evidences on its surface of the most ancient human life, and populations remote in time; its great circle of stones, etc., etc. Cloth, gilt top, beautifully illustrated in color, 9x6½, 325 pages. $3.45 post-paid.

Appearances.

By G. Lowes Dickinson.
This book comprises a series of articles recording impressions and reflections gathered in the course of travel in America and in India, China, and Japan. The Indian attitude he calls that of the religion of Eternity, and the Western attitude that of the religion of Time. Cloth, 7x5¼—230 pages. $1.65, post-paid.

The Life and Thought of Japan.

By Okakura-Yoshisaburo.
This book has the unique distinction of affording the reader an outlook upon the Land of the Cherry Blossom from a point of view which hitherto has been denied him. The author's main object is to show that Japan, in spite of all modern development, still remains the same as she ever was in the days of yore. Cloth, illustrated, gilt top, 7¼x5¼, 150 pages; $1.10, post-paid.

England of My Heart.

By Edward Hutton.
This book describes England as a great country of hill and valley, moorland and marsh, full of woodlands, meadows, and all manner of flowers, old farms and old churches, and peopled with the kindest and quietest people in the world. Cloth, illustrated, gilt top, 8x6, 380 pages; $1.65, post-paid.

Electric Light, Eyestrain, and the Growing Child

Specialists tell us that most modern ailments are the direct result of eyestrain.

It is a crime to allow a child to read and play under unmitigated electric light.

By the use of MOONSTONE globes and dishes the harsh light is diffused and softened.

It is cheaper, too, than the old way, for less candlepower will produce more illumination, so great is the deflecting and diffusing effect of this chemically perfect glass.

No. 9070. Grecian Lantern.
