Editor's Talk

A STRANGE coincidence occurred last week. One of our canvassers writes us from Calgary that some people there declare that the "Canadian Courier" is not sufficiently British to satisfy them. On almost the same mail came a letter from a prominent barrister in Halifax congratulating us on our broad Imperial sympathies. Any of our readers who are undecided in their opinions of our political course will find solace in knowing how widely people differ in their estimate of the editorial policy. In our own estimation, we are simply and frankly Canadian.

THIS week's story is by a Prince Edward Island lady who is rapidly making her way in the world of fiction. A number of excellent Canadian short stories have been secured for immediate publication.
