

this mission, and as to religious knowledge and church education commendable."

The School at Berthier, which has almost outgrown the need of a grant from the Society continues in a flourishing condition. The Rev. Mr. McManus in his last return states:—

"We have this year established a separate Institution for the girls."

The School master at Thorne in making his return says:—

"I trained one teacher and got a school for her during the year. All the scholars who can read have to learn lessons in the Bible or Catechism. Friday afternoon is set apart for this work. It has been found impossible to continue Sunday School during the winter."

The Incumbent at West Farnham states in reference to the school in his mission—

"The school is in successful operation, and its importance cannot be estimated in keeping our Protestant children from attending the large Convent and College erected by the Roman Catholics in this village."

The Incumbent at North Wakefield, one of the most distant missions of the Diocese, writes:—

"I have to thank the Society, in sending in my report, not only for the grant in aid of the school, without which it would be impossible to carry it on, but also for the kind manner in which mention is made of it in the Annual Report. The school has been a great benefit to the district. The children have all done well for the time the school has been open."

It is most satisfactory to notice that in all the Schools on Society's list, the rule of the Society is strictly observed in the matter of religious training, and instruction in the Church Catechism and Liturgy.
