SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S SPEECH.

The tolerance, good temper and patriotism of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech on the Dundonald affair will silence the race cry of the partisans. The Premier is entirely confident that the good sense of the Canadian people will assert itself in spite of efforts of this kind to upset national amity.

OLOGIES GR'R'S.

The closing of the schools brings the annual crop of complaints against the educational methods of the day. The "Successful Business Man" is to the fore and being interviewed on the subject. One of his chief trials in life is the increasing difficulty of obtaining new clerks who can write and spell.

CHURCHILL FOR HOME RULE.

Lord Randolph Churchill earned the reputation of being the most outspoken man in England. It was he who said of the extremes of rich and poor in his country that their common immorality was the only link between them.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Balfour's Cabinet is threatened with disaster. The strongest political party of modern times is drifting on the rocks and the tide of public favor is fast ebbing away.

CHURCH MUSIC.

An English Catholic makes a protest in the Nineteenth Century against the edict of Pope Pius X. on Church music. But when this British writer attempts to show reasons for his dislike of the Holy Father's musical judgment, he really makes the strongest possible case in support of the Pope's action. It is not only with Pope Pius he is dissatisfied, however. Pope Leo XIII. satisfied his English tastes even less. The late Pope, it appears, subjected the Church to "narrow and retrograde influences."

Italy and England will feel the insult most keenly. In Italy it has been no uncommon thing to hear the brindisi from La Traviata during the Elevation and in one of the most fashionable churches in London, where the seats are at a shilling, High Mass has been sung to music adapted from Bisset's L'Arlésienne.

Three orations were delivered by members of the graduating class. Mr. G. Kieper spoke on "Education Before the Reformation," Mr. George Fisher, on "Life, Its Functions and Base," and Magnus Schumacher, on "Socialism."

Following the orations came the conferring of diplomas, certificates, honors and class standing by the Right Rev. Bishop Dowling.

Then the Rev. Father Feherbach made a short address in which he expressed satisfaction with the year's work. He passed off with success in every way. The boys had done their work diligently and he thanked them for their good will to the faculty and college, especially the older boys, whom he recommended for the piety they had shown and for their good example to the younger boys.

It was a great encouragement to have the Bishop, present, as he was every year at the college commencement. To this Bishop Dowling replied that it was always a pleasure for him to come. If he had been fond of anything more than another in his life it was learning. True education consisted of the development of all faculties, spiritual, intellectual, moral and physical.

A fact that has been evident from the very first meeting of the Board of Education is that the Catholic representatives must be exceedingly diplomatic if they would avoid discomfiture from members of the majority. The elected members have a strong incentive. To save the Catholics might be a vote-getting course.

Whether Mr. Boland was within his rights or not in voting upon a recent motion can be decided in a regular way. But the members of the Board and the newspapers must prefer to debate the point publicly in a becoming fashion. This may be popular. However, we are confident that all this sort of thing will not affect the service of the Catholics on the Board, be that service little or much.

By the presence here this morning of His Lordship, the Bishop of Hamilton is shown to the Catholics of this diocese the strong and kindly interest which your good Bishop takes in your college, and his presence upon occasions of this kind, serves to perpetuate the great interest which our Holy Mother Church takes in her educational institutions the world over.

Upon listening with feelings of surprise to the eloquent addresses just delivered, I have been confirmed in my resolution that a few practical words of advice would be more appropriate upon such an occasion as this, than any attempt to reach the oratorical.

No words of praise from me are needed to supplement the plaudits of your associates or the congratulations of your professors, and the proud satisfaction of your parents and friends, and my duty is to add the final chapter of "musts" and "don'ts."

You go forth to-day from your Alma Mater brightened by the idea that your many years of study of the arts and sciences has equipped you sufficiently for the fight which is about to begin, and that you are now well on your way to the successful callings which each has mapped out for himself.

You leave your Alma Mater to-day laden with sorrow that you are losing so many old and kind associations which helped, during your college career, to lighten the burden of your studies, delighted with the hope that though commencing the battle with the world, you may again on future occasions return to renew the old associations which are so dear to you.

You are also, I have no doubt, building castles in the air of the success which each of you may meet in the different walks to which you are, bending all your energies, and for which your college course has been but a probation, an ascent of the first rung of the ladder, upon which at the top you see emblazoned in letters of gold the words "Success" the summit of your earthly ambitions.

You are imbued with lofty ideals; with grand Catholic sentiments; You have been brought up nurtured

EIGHT GRADUATES OF ST. JEROME'S

Annual Commencement Exercises of the College Held in the Basement of St. Mary's Church.

Berlin, June 21.—In St. Mary's Hall this morning the annual commencement exercises of St. Jerome's College were held, when the conferring of diplomas, certificates, etc., took place. There were three able orations, and that of Mr. Magnus Schumacher being considered the best he was awarded the gold medal presented by the Alumni Union.

There was a good attendance of friends of the college and students and of members of the Alumni Union. A good programme of music was furnished by Starnaman's orchestra. The salutatory was delivered by Mr. William Goodrow, in a capable manner.

Three orations were delivered by members of the graduating class. Mr. G. Kieper spoke on "Education Before the Reformation," Mr. George Fisher, on "Life, Its Functions and Base," and Magnus Schumacher, on "Socialism."

Following the orations came the conferring of diplomas, certificates, honors and class standing by the Right Rev. Bishop Dowling.

No words of praise from me are needed to supplement the plaudits of your associates or the congratulations of your professors, and the proud satisfaction of your parents and friends, and my duty is to add the final chapter of "musts" and "don'ts."

You go forth to-day from your Alma Mater brightened by the idea that your many years of study of the arts and sciences has equipped you sufficiently for the fight which is about to begin, and that you are now well on your way to the successful callings which each has mapped out for himself.

You leave your Alma Mater to-day laden with sorrow that you are losing so many old and kind associations which helped, during your college career, to lighten the burden of your studies, delighted with the hope that though commencing the battle with the world, you may again on future occasions return to renew the old associations which are so dear to you.

You are also, I have no doubt, building castles in the air of the success which each of you may meet in the different walks to which you are, bending all your energies, and for which your college course has been but a probation, an ascent of the first rung of the ladder, upon which at the top you see emblazoned in letters of gold the words "Success" the summit of your earthly ambitions.

You are imbued with lofty ideals; with grand Catholic sentiments; You have been brought up nurtured and matured in the bosom of a great Catholic Institution, whose graduates, like you, have gone forth year after year to labor, and have achieved. But how can you achieve success you may ask, and my answer will be by striving to avoid pitfalls, the mortals and mires which others as bright as you, and as well equipped, have sunk.

You can judge the future by the past, and judging your future by others past, you can succeed. But how? To be successful it is necessary, in my opinion, that you must have ambition, for the man without ambition, is like a ship at sea without a rudder, tossed by every storm, buffeted by every wave, looking for a friendly port, but never finding it, and in the end dashed upon the rocks and wrecked, going down amidst the waters of life, perhaps feeling that his early years of study and battle at college have been to him of little avail.

Of course it is unnecessary for me to say, gentlemen, that this ambition must be a laudable one and must have an honorable purpose to produce an honorable result.

You must have an object in life which must be constantly before your eyes, your hand must be upon the lever directing your energies and best effort in every honorable way to achieve the object, directing your course and shaping your policy, so speak, towards its accomplishment. You must not waiver and oscillate. Be steady and firm, not erratic or spasmodic in your actions, or working by fits and starts, but steadily pressing onward, avoiding all the obstacles if possible in your path, but overcoming those which cannot be avoided by honest methods and brains united.

No man ever became great in the Church or in the State without work. It is the keystone and foundation of success. Honest effort ably applied can, and will overcome the greatest obstacle. It has built railways and bridges, tunneled mountains and rivers, united continents and peoples, and with God's help, and through the instrumentality of His Church, in every day bringing the heathen and unbaptized into the one true fold.

Now, having these attributes of ambition, an objective and work, a young man starts out on his career. What is necessary for him to do and what must he avoid? You must be honest, and in this I am not speaking of honesty to others, but to yourself, and honesty to yourself is best shown by honesty to others. You must be honest in all your business dealings, upright and manly. Honest to your employer and to those who entrust their affairs to you, striving at all times to do your work and accomplish your task in the best possible manner, for it is a trite saying, but a true one, that what is worth doing is worth doing well.

You must be courteous at all times, never giving an insult, and slow in resenting one. Always bear in mind that he is no less a gentleman who refuses to unsheath the sword who is a true Catholic, and you must try to exercise in your conversation and demeanor that charity of thought, word and action, taking your great Creator as our model, so that the world may learn by your example that you are a true type of a Catholic gentleman, and above all when in doubt remember that you should "Do unto others as you would like to be done unto."

You must be manly and straightforward, gentlemanly in your conduct towards others, showing by your every act the seal and stamp of that true Catholic education which you received within these walls, repaying by your lives the honest effort, the unceasing toil and great labor of the President and professors of your Alma Mater who labor with-out hope of reward, but in the world to come to fit you for the great battle of life.

What must you avoid? Evil associations. This is an age of commercialism. A race, unfortunately, too often for wealth, in which the honorable methods of the past and upright business dealing is sometimes forgotten, and in this race for wealth and even sometimes for a living, too often are the weak made weaker, and the strong stronger, often by methods, both of men and governments, sometimes, to say the least, not altogether honorable, fair, upright or just. Association with such methods may often help, sometimes even unconsciously to yourselves, mould your lives.

There was a time in the history of England when a man was not considered a gentleman who could dine without partaking of the flowing bowl, and draining it to the dregs. To-day a man is not considered a gentleman who partakes of the flowing bowl to the extent of being guilty of intemperance. Remember that a priest cannot drink to excess, a doctor because he has the care of souls, a lawyer because he has the care of your goods, so also is it with the business man, that he considers it from his standpoint not good form, and above all remember that time lost whilst so engaged, never can be regained. Success is only to the strong, the courageous and the brave.

So mould your lives that when this earthly mission is over, you may lay down the sceptre of a life well spent and your associations and the world at large may say Palmalm qui meruit ferat, and that those who come after you may point with pride to the long list of noble graduates in the different walks of life, of this institution, who may have done honor to their Alma Mater and your Alumni.

The diplomas and certificates were awarded as follows: Diplomas—Cornelius Donovan, Geo. Fisher, Magnus Schumacher, John Winterhalt. Certificates—John Cwiak, Daniel O'Shea, Albert Soska, Andrew Szastakowski. Commercial Diplomas were awarded to—Edgar Bauer, Walter Fischer, Stephen Forster, Joseph Hudlev, Herbert Kuntz, Henry Long, Arthur McKeever, Joseph Padden, Leo Sless, Edgar Schlosser, Albert Steffan, Alfred Wintermeyer, Frank McCann.

After the exercises lunch was served at the College refectory. Dr. Joseph Loftus, formerly of 198 Spadina Ave., Toronto, has opened up a dental office in St. Catharines at 114 St. Paul street, nearly opposite James street. Telephone 466.
