LIFE IN THE WORD

Philip Mauro

Are the claims of the Bible, as related to the actions of men, in direct conflict with the democratic spirit of the times? That they are is the position taken in this impressive little work by one whose position in the legal world accounts for the keen analysis and masterful marshalling of argument in defence of the supreme authority of the Scripture. He deals with arguments advanced to impair the authority of the Bible, to reduce it to the level of other literature, or to raise other literature to its plane. He presents a forceful and most convincing view of the Bible as a living book and insists on its sufficiency, finality and completeness.
