A TANGLED SKEIN.

"But for my wife—for she is mine—my Neta, I could forgive you," said Cuthbert, his face working with uncontrollable agitation. "I never cared for the title—you are welcome to it and the old house, but you cannot give me back my lost love, my vanished happiness. Heaven help me, I cannot say I forgive."

"You would be more than man if you could now," said Mr. Rae, gently. "But time will mend that, maybe.
Why did you not proclaim yourself at once, my lord. You were recognized by more than one person, who could not believe the evidence of their senses."

"You were one of them," Cuthbert said. "I saw that in the Temple Garden. You ask me why I did not say to all the world that I was Cuthbert Merrion. It was because I heard of a happy home where my child was living, reared in love and tenderness, and where my presence could bring nothing but ruin and desolation. I heard, too, that the lord of Merrion Royal was a good master and a kind landlord, well beloved by his people, and what was I that I should disturb such a paradise?
I should never have done it but for this."

He clenched his hand fiercely over the paper he held, and put it suddenly on his breast.

"A glass of water," he said, faintly.

"Some wine," said the lawyer. You are suffering."
"No. Water. It is not much. Such a life as mine has been leaves its traces, and I have some feeling left, though I have striven hard to crush it out. It was hard work when I held my child in my arms and felt her pretty lips upon my cheeks. Harder still, I think, when my old dog recognized me—the only creature in all the world who had a welcome for me."

"Try and think of it all in the best way," said Mr. Rae, sorely puzzled what to do. "Look at your brother, your twin brother, my lord. His fault has found him out now."

Godfrey Merrion had laid his head upon his outstretched arms on the table, was sobbing bitterly —so wrung from him by the wild agony of remorse that seemed as though it would stifle him. But the wronged and injured brother could not speak the word yet.

"I was left for dead in the wild jungle," he said, "and only waked to life to find myself the bondsman of a fierce and blood-thirsty African tribe.
Think what my life was, year after year—watched, imprisoned, dragged hither and thither, with only hope that kept me alive, and the knowledge that when my brother received the wretched bits of writing that I managed to send I should be free. He did receive them, and would have let me die unrecognized and unsought—and you ask me to forgive him!"

"It is not for me to speak, my lord—it is between you two but—"

"But it is for me," said a shrill voice, so choked with tears that they none of them recognized it for a moment.
"For me, Cuthbert, his wicked wife; for me, I will try to atone. Eglantine had entered the room unperceived, with the pallor of death upon her face.

Her hair had fallen over her shoulders in her swoon, and was damp from the water her father had sprinkled over her.

As soon as she left the drawing-room he rang for his servant, and declared his intention of proceeding on his journey instead of staying the night at Merrion Royal.

"Family scenes are deemed unpleasant," he said to himself, and until this little matter is settled, outsiders are best out of the way. Besides, there's no knowing how much he knows if it is really himself. I should be decidedly de trop."

Uncomfortable thoughts of the blackmail he had levied from his son-in-law on account of the secret between them came into his mind, and he deemed a retreat the most feasible thing.

In a very little while he was gone, and was not missed much in the confusion and excitement that were beginning to make themselves manifest.
How the news reached Mrs. Bruce, in the housekeeper's room, and her subordinates in the servant's hall, and penetrated to the grooms and stable boys, it is impossible to guess, but it did leak out, and the few who had been so puzzled by "Mr. Peters" understood all now.

Every one was glad except Webster, who could exercise no more torments over the mistress now that the fact of

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

When there is disease of the delicate female organism, it is only a question of time until the general health becomes undermined. Nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and "sinking spells" produce suffering almost indescribable.
There can be no restoration of the general health until the local health of the womanly organism is re-established.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity, dries offensive drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It encourages the appetite, tranquilizes the nerves and induces refreshing sleep.
"You would be surprised if you could have seen me when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine and could see me now," writes Mrs.
Isaac S. Harris, of Gayville, Yankton Co., So.
Dakota. "I had no appetite, was completely run down. Have had stomach trouble for years and was so nervous I could not sleep. We have spent a lot of money doctoring, but there was not one thing that I took that did me any good, except for a short time, till I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'God's Medical Discovery.' In three days after I commenced taking his medicines I could see a change in the letter, and from that time I have steadily been getting better. Can walk or ride to any place I want to, and I feel like a new person. Since taking Dr. Pierce's medicines I can sleep all night and never get up in the morning, can eat anything and it don't hurt me."

iousness and sick headache.

The Ultimate Success of the treatment of Consumption depends altogether on the strength of the patient. The diseases of the lungs might be cured a great many times if the system had the strength to cast off the poisons and bear up under the strain of the cough.

PARK'S PERFECT EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and Guaiacal renders this possible. It begins by building up the system, correcting and improving the digestion and gradually eradicates the disease. It tones up the entire body and enables the patient to take on firm, healthy flesh and strength.

Park's Perfect Emulsion is composed of the purest Cod Liver Oil, combined with the chemically pure Hypophosphites and Guaiacal, a combination that is being universally prescribed by the most eminent men of nearly all countries for the treatment of all pulmonary diseases. It is prepared in such a way as to entirely eliminate all ill taste or odor, and can be retained by the most capricious stomach.

Star Laundry,
J. B. Hawthorn, Prop. York St. Tel. 133.

Cuthbert's being alive was a secret no longer.

They began to hang about the passages in groups, curious to know what was going on in the library, and whether the long-lost Cuthbert would at once assert himself and claim his place, or whether Godfrey, having the title, would keep it.

Those who ventured near the door heard sounds of whispering, but no raised voices, or any altercation.

Cuthbert raised Eglantine from the ground, for she had fallen on her knees at his feet, and was clasping him passionately.

"Don't kneel to me," he said.

"I would have spared you this if I could. I was a fool to come here, but the temptation was too great, the longing to see my old home too bitter to be borne. I should not have betrayed myself but that chance put that letter into my hands."

"Not chance," she said. "The avenging hand of Heaven! Oh, Cuthbert, forgive him, and blame me. But for me this foul thing would never have been done."

"And you could do it, Eglantine.
You, whom I once thought to call my wife, could aid in such a hideous wrong for the sake of money and a title."

"For money—yes. That was it. We thought the letters forgeries; the thing was so improbable."

"No, you didn't. You tried to think so; there is only one thing that can make this straight. Only one."

"And that is—"

He gasped out the word with difficulty, and again put his hand to his breast.

"I am not a giant of strength, he said. "It may come soon to free you."

Were his words prophetic, or did he already feel a forewarning of what was coming?

Lady Eglantine had parted her lips to speak to him, to utter a passionate entreaty for her stricken husband, when she saw a strange change come over his face.

She gave a startled cry, and motioned to the lawyer to come nearer. Only just in time.

Cuthbert's head fell forward upon his breast, and a thin stream of blood trickled from his lips, staining her rich dress, as she supported him on one side while Mr. Joseph Rae fetched water to arrest the faintness which seemed to be creeping over him.

There could be no discussion about forgiveness now, no thought of anything but medical help and tender care, and reverently and sadly they carried him to the chamber that had once been his own, and laid him down, it seemed, to die.

Before the hastily summoned doctor reached the house, all the neighborhood knew that the rightful Lord of Merrion had come back, to claim his own, the people said, though it seemed as though his own would only be his placid in the family hall.

Very gently and tenderly they watched him. Godfrey fancying that when he pressed the cold hands, and whispered gently into the dulled ears, there was a pressure and a murmur in reply. But it was waiting for death.

The long-continued repression of feelings that would have way and the agitation and agony of the discovery of the night had done their work.

The pitcher was broken at the fountain, at last and would hold water never more.

Late on in the evening, some two hours after his seizure, a messenger rode over from the farm.

A telegram had come for Mr.
Peters, and there had been no one to send with it before.

Mr. Rae received it, and went with it to the sick room, where Godfrey Merrion opened it.

"It is from your partner," he said, and telling him—my brother—that his secret is discovered, leaving it to him to go away or discover himself, as he pleases.

"Come at once. He is here. All is known, and he is dying."

A Scientific Success

PARK'S PERFECT EMULSION was introduced to the medical profession in the spring of 1890 and has been universally endorsed by them. It is always wise to ask your physician's advice before using the advertised medicines and we are quite satisfied to stand by the decision of any enlightened medical man of to-day. Our Emulsion contains the reconstructive food properties of Cod Liver Oil, the sedative and germicidal properties of Guaiacal (active principle of Gelsemium), and the tissue building properties of Lime and Soda. It is prepared in our own laboratory and under our personal supervision and we are always pleased to invite the inspection of medical men.

Protruding, Itching Piles

Rev. S. A. Duprau, Methodist Minister, Conception, Prince Edward County, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with itching and bleeding piles for years, and they ultimately attained to a very violent form. Large lumps or abcesses formed, so that it was with great difficulty and considerable pain that I was able to stool. At this severe crisis I purchased a box of Dr.
Chase's Ointment, but I had little or no faith in it, as I had tried various remedies before and to no purpose."

"Now, imagine how great and joyous was my surprise to find that just the one box cured me, so that the lumps disappeared, and also the external swelling. I feel like a different man to-day, and have not the least doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment saved me from a very dangerous and painful operation and many years of suffering.

Is It Otherwise?

If you rise in the morning feeling bright as a lark, head as clear as a bell, enjoy a hearty breakfast, go through the day's work with vim, and are ready for good sound restful sleep when bedtime comes—then you don't require Abbey's Effervescent Salt, except as a pleasant drink.

Otherwise—Otherwise.

It's the can't-sleep, can't-eat sort of man that requires Abbey's Effervescent Salt whether he suffers in a more or a less degree. There must be something wrong with his digestive organs. His stomach, liver or kidneys are not doing their duty. He needs, a medicine that will reach every organ involved, put him in a condition of health and keep him that way.
Abbey's Effervescent Salt will do this for him—quickly surely, pleasantly.

All druggists sell it. 25c and 60c a bottle.
