TRUST. MRY JOHN OARRES.

For the HURON SIGNAL. Hast thou strusted one who's candour,
Left no room to doubt his worth,
Neath who's pledge of sacred hoso,
Lay all that you held dear on earth;
Hast thou lived to see in sorrow,
All the trust thou 'det in him laid,
On affliction's dark to-morrow,
Basely, heartlessly betrayed.

Is not this a source of anguish,
Which a weight of grief imparts,
Making buoyant spirits languish,
Lacerating human hearts?
Yet mid this thou hast condolence,
The thou grovellest in the dust,
He who thus betrays thy honor,
Is not worthy of thy trust.

Yet the wrenged cease not thy trusting The with evil oft repaid,
Better far than trust to no one,
Trust to all, and be betrayed;

Bear in mind, by thy example,
Others may heed where thy tread,
Thus by treating thy defamer,
Thou heap st coals upon his head Oh that in the course of nature,

Oh, that in the course of nature,
By the civilizers arta,
Dark deceit, the hateful viner,
Were removed from human hearts;
Then each unto each prove faithful,
And all trustingly confide,
Base, deceitful and ungrateful,
Will be discussed a manaphied Will be stigmas—unapplied Zurich, Aug. 10th, 1871.
