

Chicago Stock Co.

During the past season the majority of theatrical attractions touring the United States suffered greatly from the depression in the money market. It is claimed in New York City that over three-fourths of the companies organized in that city returned long before the expected time and showing a loss in nearly every case of many thousands of dollars. The Chicago Stock Company, which is to be here all next week, was one of the marked exceptions to the rule. The main secret of their success is that the theatre-going public have become acquainted with the fact that this attraction presents fully as good plays as the majority of number two shows which are organized to present what was originally a high-class play through what is commonly termed "one night stands."

Mr. Ross Kam has always made it a point with this attraction to secure plays which were new and which had been successful with the larger companies in the larger cities. In fact, nearly every play that is offered in this company's repertoire is a production that has been seen on Broadway during the last season. Our theatre goers who have been in the habit of paying $1.50 could not find any better attractions offered, and the working classes, even were they living on one-half their usual wages, could still afford to patronize this attraction. Therefore they sailed through what was acknowledged one of the hardest years known in the show business with flying colors, and now have still greater bargains to offer at the same 25c, 30c, 50c, and 75c. prices. The advance sale of seats opened at the Atlantic Bookstore on Wednesday, June 1.

Mr. Walsh Dead.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Jas. Walsh, which sad event took place at his residence, Bannerman Street, at 5 p.m. yesterday. The deceased was stricken with paralysis yesterday morning. Mr. Walsh was a man well known and highly esteemed in the community, and for several years past occupied the position of night watchman at the Custom House. To his family and relatives the Telegram extends its sympathy.

Mr. Ernest Burgess arrived by last night's train and is staying at the Crosbie.

Vessels in Danger.

The schr. Glide, Capt. Rowe, arrived here yesterday from Baine Harbor, and was knocking about in the fog for quite a while. Capt. Rowe in speaking to the Telegram said that though it was quite calm on the shore a heavy tide set landwards, and yesterday his vessel had a narrow escape from going on the rocks. She lost her chain and anchor and it was a difficult matter to get her off the shore between Bay Bulls and Petty Harbor. The captain says that a large three topmast schooner was also in a critical position at Shoal Bay. She was very deeply laden, and he has a strong suspicion that it must have been the Canada, to which the Telegram referred yesterday, and for which a tug has been searching the past three days. The wind when he saw the vessel was dead on the land, and she was riding with two anchors out only a short distance from the shore.

McMurdo's Store News

THURSDAY, June 2, '10. Despite the dull and rather cold weather of the last two or three days, our Ice Cream season has opened satisfactorily, and as the warm weather returns, the demand is certain to increase. Those who patronize our fountain once, always come back, like Oliver, to ask for more.

Our new drink Orangeade has very favorably impressed those who have tried it. We are inclined to believe that this unique beverage will become very popular. Price 5c. a glass.

Tired, perspiring and burning feet are quickly relieved by the judicious use of Preston's Foot Comfort. Large tin 25c.—adv.

A Deserter Arrested.

Yesterday afternoon the police arrested a coloured man, a seaman, who had deserted from the S. S. St. Vincent. On Tuesday another seaman who evidently wished to quit the ship remained ashore, but was captured by the police and put on board shortly before she sailed.

A PROSPECTIVE WEDDING.—Mr. H. Parsons, carpenter, of Georgetown, is shortly to unite his fortunes with Miss Mildred Fifield. Both are well known and popular, and are the recipients of the congratulations of their friends.

(TEST No. 7.)

Asphalt a Good Pavement

But a Poor Roofing

With shingles, tin, tar and the old time roofings, the laboratory test has been of less importance than the actual test of time which you can see about you everywhere.

But with the prepared, or ready roofings, it is different. They have come into use since Ruberoid was invented. Proof of their defects and their values is not within your easy reach.

Our tests with asphalt roofings have been exhaustive. We have separated them into their elements. We have analyzed them. We have laid them according to their makers' directions. And we have watched the weather do its work.

Asphalt, at first thought, would be a channel. And these channels, tiny though they be, form a network which leaves a porous, instead of a solid roof.

But asphalt cannot be applied to a roof as it is applied to a road.

Those Troublesome Oils

To impregnate asphalt into the felt it must be fluxed with oils.

These oils are the source of trouble in asphalt roofings.

For under the sun's rays they evaporate. They are drawn to the surface of the roofing in little globules. And slowly they are absorbed by the air.

Where there is a globule of oil, there must be a hole, when it evaporates.

And behind the hole there must be a channel. And these channels, tiny though they be, form a network which leaves a porous, instead of a solid roof.

In these tiny holes and channels, gather dust and dampness. Where there was oil, there is moist dirt. With dampness and dirt comes decay of the fibre of the felt.

Some asphalt roofings are so highly charged with oils, that these work their way through long before this roofing is laid, discoloring its surface, and forming greasy spots on the paper wrappers.

Not Weather Proof

That is why asphalt roofings, in scores of tests, have failed to withstand the weather.

SERVICE 14 YEARS-NOT NECESSARY TO RECOAT

New Westminster, B.C., June 4, 1909.
Messrs. The Standard Paint Co. of Canada, Ltd., Montreal.

Dear Sirs.—Referring to your communication with reference to the experience we have had with Ruberoid Roofing, we may say that in one instance we have used this roofing on our powder magazine, which we covered more than 14 years ago. This roof has never been recoated or repaired since that time, and is to-day in perfectly good order. We have also used it on many prominent buildings in this city, and the satisfaction it has given has been general.

We remain, Dear Sirs,

Faithfully yours,

T. J. TRAPP & CO., LTD.

Irish Tribute.

Evidence of the good feeling which the late King inspired in the ranks of the Irish Nationalists was forthcoming at Belfast on May 14, when Mr. T. P. O'Connor, at a meeting of the United Irish League of Great Britain, in moving the adoption of the annual report, referred to the death of King Edward, Mr. O'Connor said that he wished to take that opportunity of sending a message to the people of England, who at that moment were in a mood of great sorrow at the loss of a King who was undoubtedly one of the greatest and most beneficent of English Kings in advancing the peace and prosperity of his nation (hear, hear.) He wished to say to the English people that those calumniated their movement and their motives who represented them as inspired by hatred of the English people. They might hate, and they did hate, tyranny, whatever the name or whatever the nationality it claimed for itself, but they had not any hatred for the English people, and their desire and prayer was that they might be permitted by good laws and by liberty to live in peace and concord and good will with the English people (applause). He desired also on their behalf to convey to the family of the late King their sympathy in the bereavement which had come upon them. They had always regarded King Edward as friendly in his feelings towards Ireland, and he (the speaker) believed that if the constitutional limitations of the King's position had permitted him, his late Majesty would have been a declared and avowed supporter of their demand (hear, hear).

He desired at the same time respectfully to say to his successor on the Throne that, as one who had seen all the self-governing dependencies of the British Empire, he must have had brought home to his mind the enormous blessing from every point of view of free institutions. He was, as Prince of Wales, to have opened the new Parliament in South Africa, where two races, who had been in conflict a few years ago, were to unite in amity, good will, and peace. Might he express the hope on their behalf that the King might be spared to complete the work of his father as the peacemaker of the world, and that at no distant date he might be seen passing through the streets of the capital of Ireland to open, or perhaps, he should say to re-open another Parliament as the end of the misunderstanding between the English and Irish people, and as the sign, symbol and token of the reconciliation between one country and the other (applause). He was sure they would extend their sincerest sympathy to Queen Alexandra, and express the hope that she might be strengthened to bear this irreparable bereavement (hear, hear).

He Stole Books.
At 8 o'clock last evening a young man who is well known to the police was arrested by Sgt. Savage and two other officers for stealing a lot of books which evidently belonged to the Methodist College. The man is a near-do-well, and resisted arrest. His clothing was torn and the belief is that he committed the theft to get a term in the Penitentiary.
