

BEAVER FLOUR

THE BLENDED FLOUR

Compare a Loaf of "Beaver" Flour Bread With One Made of Western Wheat Flour

You never realized what a difference there could be in quality. "Beaver" Flour loaf is compact like cake—the texture is fine—moorh, even, regular—the color beautifully white—the crust, a rich, crisp brown—the taste, real homemade. Western wheat loaf is full of holes—texture, coarse—the color seems gray compared with the snowy whiteness of "Beaver" Flour bread—and the flavor is almost tasteless.

"Beaver" Flour has a quality all its own, because it is a blended flour. It is Ontario fall wheat flour—with just enough Manitoba spring wheat flour to increase the strength and make the dough stand up in the oven.

It is this combination—arrived at by years of experimenting and testing—that gives "Beaver" Flour both quality and quantity.

It is because "Beaver" Flour is a true blended flour and made of the best wheat in the world, that it is equally good for bread and pastry, and best for both.

"Beaver" Flour is immeasurably superior to any western wheat flour for all kinds of baking. You can prove this to your complete satisfaction, the very first time you use it for Bread, Rolls, Biscuits, Cakes, Pies or Pastry.

A PRECIOUS INHERITANCE.

CHAPTER VI.

The Junior Partner.

"Ah, indeed—snappish, are you!" said the young man, attempting to turn himself a little, the better to see his companion. "Confound that leg!" he continued, as a fierce twinge gave him warning not to try many experiments. "I know her name is Maggie Miller, and I suppose she lives in a house. But who is she, anyway, and what is she?"

"If you mean is she anybody, I can answer that question quick," returned Hagar. "She calls Madam Conway her grandmother, and Madam Conway came from one of the best families in England—that's who she is. And as to what she is—she's the finest, handsomest, smartest girl in America; and as long as old Hagar Warren lives, no city chap with strapped-down pantaloons and sneering mouth is going to fool with her, either.

"Confound my mouth! It's always getting me into trouble," thought the stranger, trying in vain to smooth down the corners of the offending organ, which, in spite of him, would curve with what Hagar called a sneer, and from which there finally broke a merry laugh, sadly at variance with the suffering expression of his face.

"Your leg must hurt you mightily, and the young man answered: "It does almost murder me, but when a laugh is in a fellow he can't help letting it out, can he? But where the plague can that witch of a—I beg your pardon, Mrs. Hagar," he added, hastily, as he saw the frown settling on the old woman's face. "I mean to say where can Miss Miller be? I shall faint away unless she comes soon, or you give me a taste of the brandy!"

This time there was something in the tone of his voice which prompted Hagar to draw near, and she was about to offer him the brandy when Maggie appeared, together with three men, bearing a litter or small cot-bed. The sight of her produced a much better effect upon him than Hagar's brandy would have done, and motioning the old woman aside, he declared himself ready to be removed.

"Now, John, do pray be careful and not hurt the man," cried Maggie, as she saw how pale and faint he was, while even Hagar forgot the curled lip, which the young man bit until the blood started through, so intense was his agony when they lifted him upon the litter. "The camphor, Hagar, the camphor," said Maggie, and the stranger did not push it aside when her hand poured it on his head, but the laughing eyes, now dim with pain, smiled gratefully upon her, and the quivering lips once murmured as she walked beside him: "Heaven bless you, Maggie Miller!"

Arrived at Hagar's cottage, the old woman suggested that he be carried in there, saying, as she met Maggie's questioning glance: "I can take care of him better than any one else."

The pain by this time was intolerable, and scarcely knowing what he said, the stranger whispered: "Yes, yes, leave me here."

For a moment the bearers paused, while Maggie, bending over the wounded man, softly: "Can't you bear it a little longer, until our house is reached? You'll be more comfortable there. Grandma has gone to England, and I'll take care of you myself!"

The last was perfectly in accordance with Maggie's rank impulsive character, and it had the desired effect. Henry Warner would have borne alone to death itself for the sake of being nursed by the young girl beside him, and he signified his willingness to proceed, while at the same time his hand involuntarily grasped that of Maggie, as if in the touch of her snowy fingers there were a mesmeric power to soothe his pain. In the meantime a hurried consultation had been held between Mrs. Jeffrey and Theo as to the room suitable for the stranger to be placed in.

"It's not likely he is much," said

Theo, "and if grandma were here, I presume she would assign him the chamber over the kitchen. The wall is low on one side, I know, but I dare say he is not accustomed to anything better."

Accordingly several articles of stray lumber were removed from the chamber, which the ladies arranged with care, and which, when completed, presented quite a respectable appearance. But Maggie had no idea of putting her guest, as she considered him, in the kitchen chamber; and when, as the party entered the house, Mrs. Jeffrey, from the head of the stairs, called out: "This way, Maggie, Maggie—tell them to come this way," she waved her aside, and led the way to a large airy room over the parlor.

The vow had passed his lips. Henry Warner never broke his word, and henceforth Maggie Miller was as safe with him as if she had been an only and well-beloved sister. Thinking him to be asleep, Maggie started to leave the room, but he called her back, saying: "Don't go. Stay with me, won't you?"

"Certainly," she answered, drawing a chair to the bedside. "I supposed you were sleeping."

where, in a high, old-fashioned bed, surrounded on all sides by heavy damask curtains, they laid the weary stranger. The village surgeon arriving soon after, the fractured bones were set, and then, as perfect quiet seemed necessary, the room was vacated by all save Maggie, who gilded noiselessly around the apartment, while the eyes of the sick man followed her with eager, admiring glances, so beautiful she looked to him in her new capacity of nurse.

Henry Warner, as the stranger was called, was the junior partner of the firm of Douglas & Co., Worcester, and his object in visiting the Hillsdale neighbourhood was to collect several bills which for a long time had been due. He had left the cars at the depot, and hiring a livery horse, was taking the shortest route from the east side of town to the west, when he came accidentally upon Maggie Miller, and, as we have seen, brought his ride to a sudden close. All this he told to her on the morning following the accident, retaining until the last the name of the firm of which he was a member.

"And you were once there at our store," he said. "How long ago?"

"Five years," answered Maggie, "when I was eleven, and Theo thirteen;" then, looking earnestly at him, she exclaimed: "And you are the very one, the clerk with the saucy eyes whom grandma disliked so much because she thought he made fun of her; but we didn't think so—Theo and I," she added, hastily, as she saw the curious expression on Henry's mouth and fancied he might be displeased. "We liked them both very much, and knew they must of course be annoyed with grandma's English whims."

For a moment the saucy eyes studied intently the fair, girlish face of Maggie Miller; then slowly closed, while a train of thought something like the following passed through the young man's mind: "A woman and yet a perfect child, innocent and unsuspecting as little Rose herself. In one respect they are alike, knowing no evil and expecting none; and if I, Henry Warner, do aught by thought or deed to injure this young girl may I never again look on the light of day or breathe the air of heaven."

The vow had passed his lips. Henry Warner never broke his word, and henceforth Maggie Miller was as safe with him as if she had been an only and well-beloved sister. Thinking him to be asleep, Maggie started to leave the room, but he called her back, saying: "Don't go. Stay with me, won't you?"

"Certainly," she answered, drawing a chair to the bedside. "I supposed you were sleeping."

BOVRIL IS ALL BEEF.

Questions we are often asked.

- Q.—What is the sediment at the bottom of a cup of Bovril?
- A.—That is a valuable portion of the nourishment, and should never be left.
- Q.—Are you serious when you say that Bovril is more nourishing than ordinary Meat Extract or Home-made Beef Tea?
- A.—Certainly! and we have for your offered large rewards to anyone who can prove the contrary.
- Q.—But can you prove your statement?
- A.—Yes—from the pen of Baron Liebig himself, who told the world that the man who managed to get the nourishment, as well as the stimulating properties of Beef in a liquid form, would produce something far better than Liebig's Extract, and would be a public benefactor.
- Q.—And you have done this?
- A.—Yes. By a special process, the entire nutritious constituents of prime ox beef are separately treated, purified and added to specially prepared Meat Extract, and that is Bovril.

The more I look at the faces about me—and I never take a ride on the trolley car or a walk on the city streets with our studying faces—the more it is borne in upon me that beauty and the lack of it is a matter of expression more than of form or coloring.

When a young girl reads something like the above statement in a talk like mine or hears it from an older woman, she almost always turns up her nose mentally, and thinks to herself: "H'm, that sounds all right, but it doesn't work out in real life." And if she is plain, she goes on envying the girl with the regular features, and fine complexion; or if she is pretty, in the ordinary sense of the word, takes a satisfied look at herself in the mirror. You see, I know, because I've been there myself.

But, girls, we are all wrong—and you are. That isn't just newspaper morality talk. It's true. Nothing on earth mars a face more quickly than an unpleasant expression. Nothing makes us turn away offended more than a cast of features made disagreeable, not by the modeling of nature,

Household Notes.

Grease spots caused by dripping candles may be removed by using cologne.

Lemon juice, milk and the juice of ripe tomatoes are excellent to remove inkstains from white materials.

To remove old putty from window frames, pass a red-hot poker slowly over it, and the putty will come off easily.

To serve toast daintily and save crumbs, cut it in strips when preparing it. It is more tempting and nicer to handle.

When washing windows, add a small quantity of bluing water, and the windows will be improved in appearance.

Cover paint stains with butter or olive oil and apply turpentine. If the stain is very old, chloroform will be better to remove it.

Dull brass may be treated with a paste made from powdered pumice stone moistened with vinegar when it needs to be renovated.

The cover of a lard pail is very convenient to place over the burner of a gas stove when heating something in a small dish, or a cup.

It is a good plan to keep the oven door open part of the time when not in use, so that all traces of gas or odors of food may escape.

A plain cloth dipped in hot water and then in a saucer of bran will clean white paint and not injure it. The bran acts like soap on the paint.

In buying a thimble, choose one a size larger than your exact fit. When a thimble is the exact size or too small, the finger will soon become painful.

In sweeping a room, open all the windows and sweep toward the center of the room. This will keep the dust

There are plenty of substitutes (avoid them) but no real rival.
