The Grand Master at Ridgetown.

Our Ridgetown correspondent writes:
The reception tendered Most Wor. Bro.
J. Ross Robertson, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Canada, by Howard Lodge last (Friday) night was a great success. The lodge room was handsomely decorated with flowers, and nearly every member of the craft in the town was present, including R. W. Bro. Birch, D.D.G.M., of the First Masonic District, and representatives from Highgate, Leamington, Rodney and other lodges. The chair was occupied by W. Bro. B. Pavey, the W. M. of Howard Lodge, No. 391, Ridgetown, and the address of the Grand Master and his lecture on "The History of the Craft in Canada," was listened to with great interest. During his address Bro. Robertson pointed out that if the old Howard Lodge, which met in the year 1800-17 in the township of Southwold, there were no traces, and that the earliest traces of Thistle Lodge, Amherstburg, were in 1849, although that lodge was at work in 1812-15, when its sessions were interrupted by the Battle of Detroit, in which all the members took part. A reference was also made to the old Mount Moriah Lodge, which met in Westminster, near London, a lodge that was originally warranted to meet near Cobourg.

The High Chief Ranger in replying for the "High Court, A. O. The Remains Sent to Philadelphia. In response to a telegraphic order from Philadelphia the remains of the late Hugh F. McCallum, who died at Alisa Craig on Nov. 8, were forwarded to the City of Brotherly Love for burial. Mr. John T. Stephenson, funeral director, of this city, was commissioned to take charge of the remains, and his difficult task was completed in a manner highly satisfactory to the friends of the deceased and creditable to Canadian undertakers. He went out to Ailsa Craig on Monday, embalmed the body and placed it in a magnificent metallic casket, which was then forwarded to this city, and shipped from here further east by the midnight express on Tuesday. The admirable manner in which the order was executed, and the promptness in completing it, speaks volumes for the resources of Mr. Stephenson's establishment and the skill and energy with which it is directed.
