

BLISS CARMAN'S SAY

CANADIAN POET SAYS SOUL OF SOCIALISM IS IN CHRISTIANITY.

His Recent Remarkable Article in a Commercial Newspaper—Tells of Divers Kinds of Socialism, But They All Aim to Benefit Society—A Somewhat Sweeping and Liberal Definition of a Much Moot Question.

Socialism is a very safe word. Its meaning is so vague and undetermined for the most part that even the conservative take it upon their lips without trepidation. They speak indulgently of socialists as erratic and harmless dreamers, lumping together their many different aims and creeds, much as one speaks of all manner of insects as "bugs."

But the truth is that every one is something of a socialist, and many of our institutions are purely socialistic. Free schools, for instance, and free libraries (where they really belong to a township of free people and are not the gift of well meaning but offensive and misguided affluence) are purely socialistic. They exist for the good of all and are supported by the contributions of all, though there may be some to whom they are of no value and by whom they are not wanted. Never mind, we must have them, for the sense of the community has decided they are good things. If you have no children to be educated and are a hater of books, you must put your hand in your pocket to buy books for your neighbor and educate his children. That surely is pure socialism. Also it is pure Christianity.

And that brings me to the point I wish to make—namely, that the soul of socialism is love, Christianity, if you prefer that word. The divers kinds of socialism are as mushrooms in the morning. They spring up fresh every day until it seems that every man may be his own prophet in matters pertaining to the commonwealth. Yet all have for their sole object the betterment of society. However foolish, however wrong headed, however visionary or even dangerous they may be, we must still credit them nearly always with nobility of purpose and sincerity of intention. They are all making a crusade for the solution of a difficult problem in the science of life, and though many of them would not solve the perplexing equation for us at all, but would only make matters worse (in all probability), still our sympathies must be cast on their side, and we must hold our approval. That is to say the spirit that prompts them is all right, though the thought that goes to their construction is often so faulty.

For socialism in whatever form is, after all, only an ingenious device for putting in practice the generous impulses of the human heart. Socialistic schemes are just so many contrivances for the carrying out of our nobler purposes. In themselves they cannot directly foster goodness; they can only promote it by making its path easier. The right social conditions are a will be easier to hold our approval. That is to say the spirit that prompts them is all right, though the thought that goes to their construction is often so faulty.

One would not call the constitution of the United States a socialistic document, I suppose, and yet it certainly is an instrument invented to facilitate the betterment of mankind in its social state. The American Revolution, like the French revolution, like the great rebellion in England, has no other meaning than that, and the mistake we make in thinking of these movements is in putting our final trust in them rather than in the spirit of freedom and love in man which produced them. However great and important these events were, they were, after all, only so many steps in the direction of that which we believe in, this country that a democratic form of government is better than older, more primitive forms. It is not therefore necessarily the best form. It may be itself but a step to another form still better which will bring us still more enlightenment and happiness. We must be careful not to make a fetish of it, as our fathers made of monarchy long ago. It is the tendency of conservative minds to respect the settled institution, the traditional ideal. Old institutions and established ideas are indeed to be respected, but they are not as much to be respected as the spirit of humanity which begot them. They are only inventions of the mind of man pondering on some plan to give his soul vent in free and beneficent action. It is our business to maintain and guard them only so long as they prove effective for that, and to relinquish them without regret, as soon as we outgrow them and find them hindering our progress or retarding our happiness. We shall have others in their stead more ample, more adequate, more nearly perfect, and no less worthy of loyalty than they were.

And if we are not to have too great and inflexible a respect for authority and traditional institutions neither must we be overconfident of the newest plans of social management of our own devising. They, too, we must remember, are only methods of doing things. And the great permanent fact to be remembered and revered is the spirit of love which prompted us human creatures from the first. If we are to respect the remembrance of it in those of past ages, surely we must respect it in ourselves.

No form of government ever yet devised has been equal to the task of making men perfectly happy. None ever will be, for the simple reason that men are not happy by outward conditions alone, but by the inward condition of their hearts as well. And if we pin our faith to this or that outward social institution we are necessarily disappointed. The more stable the institution the more quickly does it become insufficient. It remains fixed, but man grows. Let us fancy that some very admirable and sound social reform, like the single tax, for instance, could be put in operation. There is no doubt that we should all derive untold benefit from it. We should be freer, happier and sadder as a people than we have ever been. But we should still be far from being perfectly happy unless we were sedulous in cultivating our spiritual selves and in giving effectiveness to our best personality. Socialism, in other words, is only an opportunity to live. It is not life. And we must beware of expecting too much from it. Were it once in operation we should still have our toil and our leisure, our joys and our sorrows, just as we do now. Our toil and our sorrows would be mitigated, we believe, and our joys and our leisure would be more widespread, but the same old problem of the conduct of life would still confront every mortal alive.

It seems to me, then, very evident that while we are giving our energies to the accomplishment of social progress, to the realization of socialism in some form, we should be careful to hold hard by the spirit of the matter. Let us be socialists by all means, and of our kind, but let us be loving men first of all, for what we are fighting for in socialism is only the chance for loving kindness to make itself felt, for whether we call it love or loving kindness or Christianity does not matter so long as we present the same. Let us make it effective, only if we call it Christianity we must take care not to confound it with any formalism of creed or church, for the churches also are only social institutions, outward expressions in which various truths have been embodied and too often smothered. But Christianity, let us remember, is an attitude of mind, a habit of feeling, a condition of the soul; it is not an institution. And the very gist of Christianity may quite as readily be embodied in socialism as in any formal church, and socialism whenever it appears in any sincere guise always has an aim in accord with Christianity—it aims at giving more freedom to the spiritual side of man, it aims at putting man's life under such outward conditions that he can practice virtue more easily and find happiness more abundantly. This life Christianity blows the trail for man. Socialism cuts down the trees and makes the road more open and practicable. This is something of what I mean by saying that Christianity is the soul of socialism, and I don't believe it is very far wrong. I write this in New York Commercial Advertiser.

Canada Very Much Alive.

The Canadians would make very good Americans if they were not so obstinately Canadian, says The Baltimore Sun. This is shown by the present wonderful prosperity of the Dominion. In 10 years her trade has increased by nearly $200,000,000. In a single year the increase is $40,000,000. Exports of manufactures are $18,500,000 in 1902, against $7,600,000 in 1893. In the same period agricultural exports have doubled. The tremendous energy and success of the Canadian workers are indicated by the fact that deposits in savings banks have doubled in four years. Assets of Canadian banks grew in that time from $243,400,000 to $448,300,000, the note circulation showing a like increase. Six years ago Canada was thought to be a land of potentialities, but the United States, Alaska, and the West was complaining of the influx of immigrants from Canada, and all along the line to Oregon there was said to be an incoming current. Now this is all changed. Immigrants are flocking into Canada from the United States, farmers, ranchmen, miners and other active classes. From 11,000 in 1897 the immigrants have increased to 75,000 in 1902, one-third of these being active workers from the United States. As respects the creation of wealth in the far Northwest, Canada is very progressive, as also in establishing transcontinental steamship lines and submarine cables to connect with Europe on one side and Asia and Australia on the other. Our northern neighbor seems to be very much alive.

Stories in Agriculture.

The bulletin on "Nature Study or Stories in Agriculture," promised by the Ontario Department of Agriculture has just been issued by the King's printer. It is neatly bound in a paper cover imitating bird's-eye maple, and contains stories dealing with the life of plants, roots, wheat, yeast, butter, insects, birds, and animals. The idea is to present a life-history of each plant and insect in popular form, so that children may grasp it. This bulletin, which contains about 80 pages and which is illustrated by suitable engravings, will be sent to each teacher of the province, with the intention of inducing teachers to deal with these subjects in class. This is the first bulletin of the kind issued, and it is proposed to issue one yearly. Something of this kind is required to draw the attention of teachers and children in the Public schools to the great and fascinating facts and processes of nature all about them, and this bulletin is a creditable beginning.

Bruno, the Hunter.

Rod and Gun in Canada, published in Montreal, has in its December number a new poem by Dr. Drummond, entitled "Bruno, the Hunter," which tells of a hunter who, while hunting, was struck by a bullet which entered his chest, and he lay on the ground, his life ebbing away. The poem is a beautiful and touching story, and is a creditable addition to the collection.

KING AS A BUSINESS MAN.

He Has Reformed Many Things and Adopted New Methods—The Product of His Time.

There is fortunately nothing in common between the King of Belgium and the King of England. Instead of making an idle pretension that his daughter should be driven from her mother's coffin because of a marriage of convenience, the King of England, as is known, gave his hearty consent to the marriage of his daughter with a subject. But in this respect the two monarchs can be compared—that they are both eminently the children of their times, and are both essentially in accord with the spirit of their century. The changes which the King has introduced in national and elsewhere among the people of this, it is difficult to write our London correspondent to realize how much there was of the eighteenth century in all that surrounded the late Queen; and this state of things in many cases was a pathetic evidence of how times changed between her accession and her death. She belonged to the period when the court was still regarded as the rightful asylum of any number of people of the better class who had fallen on evil days, and who again was a survival of the still earlier times, when the court was the source and fountain of nearly all forms of public employment. And when the present King came to the throne he found, accordingly, a condition of things that required the pruning knife of the modern man.

This is not, however, the only change in the survival of eighteenth century manners which is to be observed at court. There has also been a revolution in the manner of receiving guests. In the old court, even very distinguished visitors were treated in a fashion which only the traditions of ancient times could explain—perhaps it might even be said, extenuate. The illustrious guest who was received at dinner and treated with the utmost distinction, the next morning without again seeing the gracious lady who had been his hostess. I remember General Grant was a guest at Windsor Castle. He then full of honors and glory, had in twice the chief ruler of his nation, and indeed, he was going to be put forward for candidate for office a third time. But, though General Grant was a warm reception from the Queen, he had to go away the next morning without seeing her. The Queen would have been the last person to have had to have seen him, but she was not the essence of politeness; but she was the slave of the traditions in which she had been brought up; and do bless this was the etiquette prescribed.

It is reported in some of the newspapers that the King has made considerable changes in these rules, and that he performs the duty of a host more after the manner of the modern private gentleman. Indeed, I heard Mr. Broadhurst, shortly after his visit to Sandringham, declare that the Prince of Wales, as the King, was far simpler than the Mayor of Boston. Apparently, too, the King does not cherish the same curious reverential attitude towards the Stuarts which was one of the characteristics of the late Queen. After all, I have Stuart blood in my veins, and the Queen said herself on a memorable occasion, "So well known was her secret love for the Stuarts that Sir John. Pope Hennessy, who had extraordinary insight and tact, once put on a case in Stuart colors when he was invited to the Ball at the Queen's, and the Queen—very observant—signified that she saw and was pleased."

"Cape Boys" and Their Ways.

In South Africa the mail carts convey passengers for long distances. The drivers of these vehicles are usually "Cape Boys," men of mixed blood, of various nations, Grikwa, Koranna, with a dash of the white man superadded. They are first-rate drivers, and their teams of six, eight, and even ten, horses, with extraordinary skill and dexterity. Another colored boy sits alongside the driver, who, which implement he manages as deftly as a first-rate fly-fisher does his rod and casting line. Nevertheless, these Cape boys are reckless folk, much addicted to drink and immoderately vain of their performances as "Johannes." It is the fashion with them to start away from and make the approach to the village inns or bathing places, where they make their halts, at a hard gallop. In this way, owing to the drivers' drinking habits and the ordinary risks of bad roads, accidents often happen, the cart and its passengers are sometimes overturned, and broken bones result. The cart, itself, is a two-wheeled tented carriage, having two or three seats placed one behind the other, the passengers invariably looking toward the horses. Luggage and mails are strapped on behind, or, if a regular coach is used, upon the top.

Joke Upon Graphic Readers.

There was quite a run on The Daily Graphic of the last Tuesday in October, some jokes having caused the price of copies to go up to a shilling or more. They pointed out to hundreds of their friends the following paragraph:

"The banking-giving service itself lasted from 12.30 to 3 o'clock p.m., and was of imposing impressiveness. It was noted that, with one solitary exception, the behavior of the congregation assembled was decorous. The exception was the Prince of Wales, who strove to make a cad of himself by his ability to eat so much money, he says, that he has never been able to save any. He learned to be 'de bigger' spot in de country," and his cash left him as fast as it came in.

Within the memory of the present generation Booz has been known to beat a tree by the hour at the rate of 10 cents a tree, and to run his head became a tame game many years ago, and student ingenuity contrived all sorts of new tests for the skull of Booz. Breaking planks over his head, he was allowed to be struck squarely with an iron hammer, but was forced to admit that it gave him a slight headache, and he was allowed to be repeated.

Gradually as age came upon him Booz relaxed his diversions to some extent, but even then, bent as he is with his hundred years, his head will still stand plank-splitting at libitum. It was five or six years ago that he called a halt on tree-biting and running his head over stone walls. His skull, he explains, is as tough as ever, but a

RADWAY'S PILLS.

Persons advanced in life often suffer from indigestion, and from paralysis or inability to evacuate from the bowels, likewise from urinary difficulties. We have the evidence of a large number of aged persons from 60 to 80 years of age, who have been cured of this defect who had been compelled to resort to injections or even to the use of the catheter. Radway's Pills are used by the aged, and will be prolonged to the full measure of time. Another great end is secured by nourishing the body with these remedies, the faculties remain in health, and the body is kept in a state of decay, body and mind are invigorated and the brain.
